Conservatives in Major Party Have Balance of Power

Republican Gains in Congress End Administration Control

Washington—(AP)—Conservative Democrats are holding the balance of power in most congressional committees this year, largely as a result of Republican gains in the 1936 elections.

The greater Republican membership means more committee posts for the minority, with a consequent decrease of the Democratic representation. Thus it is possible for a combination of Republicans and a few Democrats to override the wishes of administration supporters on the bulk of the committees.

The house appropriations committee, for instance, cut $150,000,000 from the president's relief request because a number of Democrats joined Republicans in the voting.

Some few conservative Democrats have won new appointments to influential committees in the last week. Others have edged upward to more important positions by the traditional seniority rules.

Oddly enough, though the committees are the creation of congress, it is rarely that either house manages to shake itself free from committee decisions and strike out for itself.

Changes in Laws
Thus, the way it works out is that the laws which were enacted freely during the first congresses of President Roosevelt's administration are likely to be carefully and slowly recast by conservatives.

Some of the quiet maneuverings that have given a different tenor to many of the important senate and house committees have been achieved only by warm disputes inside the Democratic party.

One of the hottest was over the selection of Congressman West of Texas for a Democratic vacancy on the house ways and means committee.

West was backed by the conservative wing of the party. He was one of the 16 house members to vote against the $725,000,000 emergency relief bill.

The ways and means committee post, for a Democrat, is one of double importance. Not only does the committee shape tax legislation, but its Democratic members form a board of party strategy in the house. They work out the committee assignments for other Democrats.

In certain other spots, conservatives appear dominant. Administration control of the rules committee is regarded by many members as doubtful.

All important legislation flows through that committee to the house floor. The committee decides how long it shall be debated, whether it shall be open to amendment, and whether it shall be put ahead of the hundreds of other bills for consideration.

Sometimes the decisions of the committee are voted down, but that does not happen often. One of the chief complaints that the administration made against former Congressman O'Connor (D-N.Y.) who was defeated last November, was that the committee under his chairmanship had blocked administration legislation.

A battle in that committee held the wage and hour bill off the house floor for many months.

Congressman Sabath (D-Ill.), dean of the house, was chosen yesterday to succeed O'Connor, and the Democratic vacancies on the committee were filled with Delaney (N.Y.), Colmer (Miss.), Nelson (Mo.), and Dempsey (N.M.). All are considered administration supporters, but many conservatives believe the conservative holdovers members of the 14-man committee will have the balance of power.

Hitler Indicates He's Getting Ready to Move on Eastern Europe

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
New York—(AP)—Herr Hitler's bid to ensure the willing cooperation of Poland in his expansionist program tends to confirm that he is getting ready to move again in eastern Europe.

His biggest project for the immediate future is believed generally to involve the golden Ukraine from Russia. For this he needs Poland's aid.

Poland is the logical gateway to the Ukraine, since Germany is cut off from Russia by Polish and Rumanian territory.

Poland has a crack army and a wealth of food-stuffs which would make her an invaluable ally.

Poland furthermore has within her borders many Ukrainians who might wish to join their Russian

Reminds Election Board Members to See Party Chairmen

Mayor Goodland today reminded all election board members to contact their county political party chairmen soon for jobs on election boards in the spring elections.

All the lists will be revised because of the new 18-ward plan which will be in effect with the primary election, Mar. 14. Many workers living in the various wards now live in other wards because of the change, the mayor said.

The party chairmen are: Dr. L. C. Kolb, Republican; Gustave J. Keiler, Democrat; and Anton J. Miller, Progressive.

Relief Problem Source of Worry To Administration

Legislature Will Have to Act Quickly Because Money Is Gone

to support the other functions of government, it was pointed out. Meanwhile these considerations stood out in discussions of the relief question.

1. Municipal governments, particularly those in the poorer northern counties, are less able to carry their relief burden during the next two years than they were in 1937, when the legislature provided $3,000,000 for their aid.

2. Relief needs cannot be ascertained with any degree of certainty until the present discussions in congress on the WPA program result in an appropriation. Although it has been estimated that $5,000,000 will carry Wisconsin's state relief program through the next two years, that estimate is based on the expectation that WPA employment in Wisconsin during the biennium will average at least 45,000 persons.

3. Possibility that Congress may adopt recommendations which will sharply reduce the amount of the National Resources Committee to coordinate all the federal relief agencies in Wisconsin, along with those in Michigan and Minnesota, into a gigantic conservation work program.

4. Possibility that the state legislature may adopt long advocated plans to resettle large numbers of sub-marginal settlers in the poorer districts of northern Wisconsin, and legislate for the merging of townships, school districts, and possibly other units for economy reasons.

During December, the relief load in Wisconsin was 48,000 persons, slightly higher than previous months because of WPA layoffs. That load necessitated the payment of $990,000 in aids, exclusive of administration.

Up to the present the state's contribution for relief has been almost exclusively confined to those localities and counties where burdens were too heavy for local taxation to support. Today, however, the state relief fund is running low, approximately $200,000 remaining.

Most significant factor in the relief problem is the suggestion for a tri-state public works program for conservation.

Permanent Program
The suggestion is the outgrowth of the Great Lakes Regional Committee's work during the last year. Through such a program, it will be pointed out, overhead on all of the federal programs now operating in the northern section of the state can be reduced, while at the same time a permanent program for the rehabilitation of the northern counties will have been begun.

Martin W. Torkelson, head of the tri-state study group and of the Wisconsin state planning board, officials on the proposed program this week.

However, it was pointed out, such a program would produce no immediate benefit to the rest of Wisconsin, although much might be expected eventually in reduced relief, pension, and other welfare costs in the northern counties. Governor Hays still wrestles with the problem of deciding upon a state general relief program, and of finding the money with which to finance it.

He may draw some consolation from the fact that Progressive-enacted estates and gift surtaxes enacted in 1937 will continue to produce revenue during his two year term in office. By the terms of their enactment, their receipts may be used for relief or general state purposes, as the emergency board sees fit.

These taxes, according to capital authorities, may be expected to produce about $750,000 a year, or about $1,500,000 for the biennium, so that when the administration decides to use them for relief, that amount may be subtracted from the $5,000,000 appropriation which P. D. Flanner of the public welfare department declares is needed for state relief aids during the two year period.

It was pointed out today that the new administration's relief job may

Prosperous Americans are 'Spoiled Brats,' Speaker Says

Waupaca—Speaking before the stockholders of the Mutual Building and Loan association at their sixteenth annual business meeting, Carl Taylor, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Building and Loan League, Milwaukee, declared that we in America "are so prosperous that we're a bunch of spoiled brats."

He addressed the dinner meeting which was held Monday evening at the Delevan hotel.

America, prosperous physically, Mr. Taylor said, is the happiest nation in the world. While one-half of the people in the world have lost their freedom and building and loan associations have been dissolved in more than one-half of the civilized countries, here we have everything a spoiled child could desire of a fond parent, he declared.

There can be no comparison of living standards. Even our people on relief have better living standards than any country in the old world ever dreamed of, he said. Never have people had such material comforts. We are a prosperous country.

"Prosperity comes from knowing God's laws in the physical world and applying them," Mr. Taylor asserted. "We have conquered smallpox and expect to have cancer under control within another ten years if the world is not wrecked by then, he said. But God set up spiritual laws as well as physical, and when we come to apply the spiritual as well as the physical, then we will attain happiness and not before. We have spent twenty years or more in direct violation of the spiritual laws—we are automobile mad; luxury conscious; already our 1939 earnings are spent. We built a Hitler, a politician and dictator, a misfit so great that even the great British Empire is on her knees wondering if Hitler will let her live. Application of our spiritual laws will bring us happiness, lack of application will bring our ruin. There is nothing wrong in the world today except what is in the hearts of men and women."

Election followed the address. Tellers were Sanford Strand, Walter Wildfang, Lawrence Olson, and Raymond Martin.

Officers and directors of the association are: President, Peter Holst; vice president, James H. Dance; secretary-treasurer, Ralph E. High; assistant secretary, Charles A. Hansen. Other directors are Harvey Peterson, Chris G. Peterson, Chris H. Hansen, John A. Peterson and William Kneeland.

The report of Treasurer High showed the total assets of the organization to be $209,353.53; mortgage loans, $16,300; dividend waiver mortgage loans, $150,264.38 or a total of $166,564.38. Stock loans amounted to $2,215; real estate owned, $14,619.77; land contracts, $6,332.48; insurance advanced for borrowers, $553.71; furniture and fixtures, $2,200; federal home loan bank stock, $2,200; due from depository banks, $6,751.40; due from federal home loan bank, $10,000 and cash on hand, $116.81.

Loans went up $8,000 during the year, 170 mortgage loans being carried on the books. During 1938 there were 27 mortgage loans amounting to $34,692. Of this amount $7,750 went into the construction or rebuilding of five homes; $10,950 went for the purchase of seven homes; $7,500 was used for six existing mortgages and the balance of $8,042 was used for all other purposes. Seven loans were paid up during the year and 27 new ones added, according to High's report.

The reason, it was explained, is because the federal pension laws do not include sisters in the classification of "dependents" who may use veterans' compensation estates.

Submitted by the state adjutant general's office to the attorney general's office for an official opinion, it was ruled that while veterans' estates are to be administered in accordance with the laws of the state, the veterans' administration has a right to object if the disposition of the estate is regarded as improper.

Because life is God, life must be eternal, self-existent. Life is the everlasting I Am, the being who was and is and shall be, whom nothing can erase."

Electrical Devices Installed To Speed Badger Legislating

Madison—(AP)—Three new electric devices installed to make legislating easier for Wisconsin's 100 assemblymen, were put to work last week when the sixty-fourth regular session convened in the capitol.

Before setting down to the usual business Thursday, the lower house went to school for a little while. The members listened to B. H. Seals, chief capitol electrician, explain how the new vote tabulator, page boards, and public address system work.

Then, they played with the buttons on their desks, flicking the red and green lights on the vote and page boards on and off. Satisfied that everything was in good running order, Speaker Verne Thomson (Rep), Richland Center, took a test roll call.

This try-out culminated two years of work begun by the last session of the legislature which appropriated $30,000 for these innovations along with the replacement of the scarred rug and repair of battered desks in the assembly chamber.

Need Filler Space
Full of holes caused by cigarette and cigar butts, the old carpet was 30 years old. The resplendent red plush rug substituted is now preparing to weather a similar storm.

Despite the repair and repainting of the desks, criticism of their small filing space was one of the first things heard on the assembly floor. A resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the possibility of enlarging the desks was immediately passed unanimously. As each session proceeds, the desks become so littered with books, pamphlets, and papers that some diminutive assemblymen can only be seen with difficulty from the front of the chamber.

In previous sessions, one large voting board hung from the east gallery of the chamber. Members voted via one white button on each desk. This "step-up" system called for one push for "aye," two pushes for "nay" and three for "pass."

Behind this board off the gallery, a camera was placed. In an average time of 35 seconds, a regular commercial photograph showing the vote was developed, printed, and shot down to the desk of the assistant sergeant-at-arms through a small tube.

Improved System
Delays and mistakes occasioned by this system are prevented by the one just installed. Each member has two buttons on his desk, along with a release button if he wants to change his vote.

When the speaker orders the chief clerk to prepare the roll, the latter turns a lock on his desk. First the number of the bill or resolution is shown in white lights above the two voting boards on either side in front of the chamber. Then, the voting circuit is unlocked and the members may proceed to vote by pushing either the "aye" or "nay" button.

With one button pushed down, it is impossible for the other one to be moved. Only by pressing the release button between them can the other button be used. After a short interval the roll is ordered closed, the switch locked, and no more votes may be registered.

The vote is recorded at the desk of the chief clerk where the entire system is controlled. A sheet is inserted in the recorder before the vote, and as the lights go on, corresponding plungers in the recorder jump up.

When the switch is locked, three carriages roll over the inserted sheet, resulting in a series of holes where the plungers are sticking up. These perforations show how the vote went. While all this is going on, a Veeeder counter, like those on printing presses, automatically tabulates the vote total, and stamps the final figures at the bottom of the sheet.

One Operation
Thus, in one operation, without the necessity of human aid, the roll sheet records each member's vote and the total "ayes" "nays" and absences.

When members before had to stand up and wave a paper in order to attract a page's attention, now it is only necessary to lift a third button on the same switch. Two electric "enunciators" on either side in the rear flash the number of the roll requiring a page.

Innovation number three is the public address system. While the assembly had temporary loud-speakers for apparatus during the speakership of George W. Carow (Prog), Lady-smith, in the 1935 session, this is the first permanent system to be adopted.

A microphone on the speaker's desk is connected with six loud-speakers, two in each of the three balconies. For the convenience of members desiring to use a microphone, there are six portable desk and floor types for use at their desks.

To assist the chief clerk and the speaker in hearing members in distant parts of the chamber, each has a "horn" on his desk to pick up voices from the floor. An electrician, trained for the job and given the title of voting machine operator, is in charge of all these appliances. He has over 50 switches, in addition to the volume controls for the public address system.

Four Radio Stars Are Subpoenaed in Jack Benny Trial

Burns, Gracie Allen, Jack Pearl, Kenny Baker May Testify

New York—(AP)—Four of the nation's best known radio stars have been subpoenaed by the government to testify at the smuggling trial of Jack Benny, movie and air comedian, set for a week from today.

The witnesses include George Burns and Gracie Allen, Jack Pearl, comedian, and Kenny Baker, a singer on the Benny program. Burns already has pleaded guilty to smuggling jewelry—the charge facing Benny—and Albert N. Chaperau, co-defendant with each, has admitted his guilt in both cases.

Chaperau, who posed as a commercial attaché of the Nicaraguan government to gain diplomatic immunity, also has pleaded guilty to conspiring with Mrs. Elma N. Laurer, wife of a New York judge, to smuggle in Parisian finery.

Mrs. Laurer pleaded guilty, leaving Benny the only person thus far indicted for a trial. Benny denied the charge and turned over jewelry valued at $2,131 which federal authorities said had been brought into the country illegally by Chaperau.

As the grand jury continued its investigation of Chaperau's activities, Assistant United States Attorney Joseph L. Delaney disclosed 15 more subpoenas for business and social notables had been issued.

He said that among them were several Manhattan debutantes. They will testify before the grand jury.

Their names were obtained from a study of correspondence in the possession of Chaperau, accused by the government of smuggling in valuable trinkets for his circle of prominent New York and Hollywood acquaintances.

Fred R. Zimmerman, New State Secretary, Has Topsy-Turvy Times in Political Circles

BY JOHN WINGAARD
Madison—They tell many stories about Fred R. Zimmerman, Wisconsin's politician par excellence, who rose from obscurity to secretary of state more than a decade ago, went up to the governorship, descended a few years later to a WPA job, and now has rejoined the state's rulers as secretary of state once more.

It is related of him that when he was governor about 12 years ago a farmer near Madison wrote him a series of insistent letters complaining about a disease which afflicted his pigs. No one could figure out what ailed the pigs, and could the governor help? The letters piled up in his capitol office, and finally, the story says, Zimmerman drove his auto out to the farm, examined the pigs in the farm-yard, and delivered his opinion.

The story may not be true. It is more than likely apocryphal, but it is illustrative. Anyone who knows Fred Zimmerman even slightly can imagine that such an act would be uncharacteristic.

Fred Zimmerman is the essence of the natural politician, from the tips of his shiny shoes to his well-kept, slightly graying hair. Wisconsin has had many unusual political personalities, but no other governor in recent times has been quite such a dashing politician as this man who reached the heights in state politics, then was deposed by his own party to the bottom, forced by economic circumstances into the lowest economic ranks, and then succeeded, through the adaptability of his character and the exigencies of the times, in rising to high political position again.

Always at It
Somehow you don't expect to find statesmanship in a man like Fred Zimmerman. He personifies the kind of man you're read about in the machine politics of the big cities, the man who sees politics as a way of life rather than as a matter of issues, principles or social problems. He is the kind of politician who is always at work.

Friends tell that he has never been known to take a seat in a restaurant or hotel lobby with his face away from the door. He must see all who enter, and if possible, greet them and shake their hands. A vote to Zimmerman is something to honor and treasure. Votes are the substance of his career. And he seldom lets an opportunity pass to gather them in. He is an inveterate joiner. Callers are always welcome at his office. Reporters know that they can sit on his desk and he'll like it. Photographers are made to feel like the salt of the earth. The handshake? Never casual, always hearty. And tireless. Julius Heil got his picture in the paper nursing a bandaged hand after his handshaking activities at the inaugural. But if he was feeling normal, it is safe to say that Fred Zimmerman, back in the crowd, shook just as many as the new governor did that day.

Although he is nearing 60, Zimmerman appears much younger. There is gaiety in his manner, and a spring to his step. He is back again in the spot which the true politician covets above anything else, a public office, a place to greet his friends with the leisure to play the great game.

Sixteen years ago Fred R. Zimmerman entered for the first time the office into which fortune's unpredictable wheel has now cast him again. Then he was 42, now he is 58, but one would hardly know the difference.

Twice his voting friends sent him down to the secretary of state's office, a pleasant, easy job in congenial surroundings with the advantage of having few responsibilities which the regular assistants in the office can't handle.

But optimism is one of Zimmerman's prime traits. Another office in the massive capitol building beckoned, back in 1926.

BACK IN THE CAPITOL AGAIN

Politics has been the main activity of Fred R. Zimmerman, former governor and now secretary of state, for many years and there are few offices he has not held or to which he aspired. Wisconsin has had many unusual politicians but no other has been quite so dashing as this man who reached the heights and then was deposed by his own party.

At that time the LaFollette Progressive party sorely missed its late leader, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, who died in 1925. Governor Blaine, then leader of the party, desired to succeed Senator Irvine L. Lenroot in Washington, and the Progressive leaders endorsed Herman L. Ekern, then attorney general, as their candidate for governor.

This didn't agree with the designs of other Progressives, it soon followed, including Zimmerman, and W. Stanley Smith, once insurance commissioner, who threw their hats in the ring as candidate to oppose Ekern for the nomination.

The conservative Republicans, then a minority in the party, nominated Charles B. Perry, the Wausau assemblyman who continued to serve in the legislature until this term.

As the summer passed, it soon became apparent that the genial, easy manner of the secretary of state was telling, and that Zimmerman was to get the nomination. The result was that most of the stalwart leaders deserted Perry and jumped on the Zimmerman standard, hoping thus to control the Progressives by the time-honored "boring from within" method.

Thus Zimmerman, with LaFollette absent to clarify the issue, campaigned on a Progressive record with stalwart support. He won handily, although Perry persisted on going through with an independent candidacy in the general election.

Tough Situation
The situation was a hard one, however, as was soon shown. He found a legislature which was comprised of a senate made up of a majority of conservatives who were not sure of the political affiliation of the executive because of his Progressives, managed by Blaine and dominated by Progressives who were dubious because of his stalwart attachments in the campaign.

The result was doleful. The Progressives, managed by Blaine and Young Bob, picked Joseph Beck, congressman, as their candidate for 1928, when Zimmerman had hoped to win another term. The stalwarts also turned him down, decided on a Sheboygan county manufacturer of plumbing fixtures who had won prominence and fame as a vote-getter in the Hoover delegate campaign that year. His name was Walter Kohler.

Zimmerman remained in the race, however, and was completely overshadowed by the more significant fight between Beck and Kohler in a campaign which brought the successful industrialist to the governor's chair.

Out of Sight
Zimmerman dropped out of sight. In Madison the scene changed, from Kohler to LaFollette, LaFollette to Schmiedeman, Schmiedeman to LaFollette again. "Zim," as the newspaper copyreaders had long ago dubbed him, was all but forgotten.

But a natural born politician doesn't give up so early in life. In 1934 he appeared as a candidate for governor, and lost decisively. In 1936, after watching the victorious organization of the new Progressive party, and apparently much impressed, he showed up in Milwaukee as a candidate for congressman in the Fourth district. But the voters in that party still thought about the same; he wasn't welcome there either.

In between he kept his nimble hands and his adventurous mind busy enough. In 1929 he went to Spain as an appointee of Herbert Hoover to the World's exposition at Seville. He took a mild fling into Milwaukee municipal politics, almost ran for alderman in 1930. In that same year he answered public charges before a legislative committee in the capitol by saying that he had never been affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan. He took a fling in the oil business, which he hoped would "make a million," but didn't. In 1934, while running for governor, he had a scrap with the Republican party's organization leaders which culminated in a not too lively campaign.

At about the same time he advised the state Democratic organization to fire its state chairman, Joseph Martin of Green Bay, on account of the latter's lobbying activities. The advice went unheeded. This fall Martin's nephew, John E. Martin, took office with the versatile Zimmerman as attorney general.

Times changed as the years went on. In 1933 "Zim" appeared to have ended his political career. He asked for, and got, a WPA job, was made a certifying officer at $175 a month. He promptly lost that, however, when he ran for congress.

Back in Madison
His old Progressive connections came back to aid him after the campaign, however. He was appointed an auditor in the office of Sol Levitan, the venerable state treasurer who then had charge of the beverage tax division without the bother of civil service. Again the ex-governor's remuneration was $175 a month. It didn't last. Much against Old Sol's will, the legislature finally decreed that the merit system should be extended to cover the beverage tax division. The man who once headed the state government and all its branches, ended his connection with the beverage tax division payroll. An applicant who wrote better answers to examinations succeeded him.

Summer of 1938 found Zimmerman in business, as a representative of a roofing company. Politics was still his avid side-line, though, and it wasn't long before state political circles were aware that "Zim" was in the running again. As nonchalantly as he had joined them two years before, he deserted the LaFollette forces and came out for secretary of state as a Republican. Maybe he heard the rural grumbling; maybe his astute political sense told him of the events in store on Nov. 8. At any rate he won the nomination, and came through with the ticket in grand style later.

So now he is back in the capitol. His door is open, and you're welcome. Maybe he'll talk about the next campaign, maybe, who knows, he would like to have that other job back again too.

Era of Reform in Administration Is Seen by Lawrence

Committee Reports Devoted to Better Handling of Affairs

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—This begins to look like an era of administrative reform. Nearly every message that comes from the executive branch of the government these days to congress and some of the reports that are being made public by congressional committees are devoted to better methods of administering the affairs of the federal government.

Critics may wonder why so many simple changes are only just now being offered, but anything so unwieldy as the federal government structure is not readily transformed. Thus, the president's executive order creating a federal estate board to make a comprehensive record of just what property the federal government holds and its relationship to taxation problems in local communities has long been needed, but it is only one of a number of things that get side-tracked in an era of social reform.

Take the social security message of the president, which now embodies the suggestions of a non-partisan board which has been studying the law's operations for several months with expert knowledge of the subject. The suggested changes, such as the insistence on a merit system among the states which administer the law, might seem to be A-B-C and fundamental, but it was not one of the needs foreseen when the act was passed.

The drive at the time the social security law was passed was to get the big insurance plan into operation and trust to experience to point out defects and additions. There can be no doubt that, once the system of old age pensions and unemployment insurance involving some 42,000,000 individuals thus far, the pressure to include other groups hitherto exempted would sooner or later be felt.

Spending Plans
It is a curious commentary on present-day affairs in Washington that, while "spending" is decried, the plans for increasing the federal government's paternalism go on apace, and no political group is strong enough to call a halt. The president's message asks for liberalizing of old age insurance payments, especially in the early years of the system, and the paying of supplementary benefits to the aged dependent wives of retired workers. All this and other recommendations will increase the total expense, which is to be met by higher and higher payroll taxes.

Yet the Republican party, which was given a larger membership in the house and senate at the last elections, presumably because of the protest of the nation against "spending," contains a large number of members who have pledged themselves to work for higher and higher pension payments.

Recognition of the problem of old age pensions and unemployment insurance has been ingrained in the platforms of both major parties, and the payroll taxes are here to stay. The economic effect, or rather the impact of such taxes on the whole economic system, being reflected in higher and higher production costs and in a withdrawal of considerable sums from the stream of purchasing power, cannot but be of increasing significance. The congress is nevertheless prepared to go along with the amendments to the Social Security law because President Roosevelt has made it unpopular politically to do otherwise.

Distribution
These realities are being faced by congress, but the trend is to make sure that whatever sums are distributed go to the persons who are deserving and that efficiency of administration is attained. So the emphasis quite naturally is being placed now on the problem of equitable distribution of the burden.

The suggestion that states with low per capita income be given a larger share of federal aid than states with the average or better than average per capita income is one which is likely to be vigorously debated in congress, but, broadly speaking, that's what the federal government has been doing with all tax moneys; indeed, there has been no yardsticks of measurement for federal grants. The discretionary power of the federal agency to spend public funds in accordance with political or group pressure has been unrestrained. Some formula to measure federal grants to states on the basis of population and state income is at least a start toward a more scientific or uniform formula of federal disbursement of moneys collected from the taxpayers.

If now, in this new era of administrative reform, there is developed some equitable system of levying taxes so as not to retard the processes of production or to choke the price structure, but actually to provide incentives for increasing production and business volume, there would be less concern about some of the social security budget which are coming to be recognized as essential for the care of the aged and the unemployed.

New Birth, Death Records are Set in State During 1939

Madison—(U)—Preliminary figures compiled for 1938 indicate several new birth and death records were set in Wisconsin, the state board of health reported today.

For the first time in state history, it is expected that total deaths from tuberculosis will fall below 1,000, or 31 deaths per 100,000 population.

The state's general death rate will be approximately 10.1 deaths per population, a figure slightly lower than the average annual rate for the last six years, it was said.

Francis E. Kester, the department's senior statistician, estimated also that the 1938 birth rate would be 18 deaths per 1,000 population, compared with the 17.3 average of recent years.

Kester said a new low infant mortality rate of 42 deaths per 1,000 live births was probable, with maternal deaths resulting from child birth promising to hit a new low of 3 per 1,000 live births.

Government Motion Is Stayed in Sale Of Land by Indian
Milwaukee—(U)—Judge Patrick T. Stone, sitting in federal court here Monday, temporarily stayed a government motion to set aside the sale of a 48-acre Shawano county homestead by a Winnebago Indian. Assistant United States District Attorney Carl R. Becker told the court that the late Two Horns, Winnebago Indian, obtained title to the land Feb. 17, 1897, under the homestead act which prohibited sale for 20 years with a deadline later extended by presidential order.

Two Horns sold the property to Mrs. Julia Gilbertson of Shawano for $1,700 on March 15, 1918, Becker said.

The defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gilbertson and the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, contended they had no knowledge that the limit had been extended.

Stating the issue could be settled when the government suit was brought to trial, Judge Stone commented the presidential order was an administrative act rather than a direct act of congress, of which the public could not be expected to be informed.

Frankfurter Will Sit on a Supreme Court That Has Swung Toward His Liberal Views

BY MORGAN M. BEATY

Washington—(U)—Much of the New Deal shooting will have been over by the time Felix Frankfurter reaches the Supreme Court.

But the "architect of the New Deal"—the Harvard professor who inspired much of the so-called liberal law-building under Franklin D. Roosevelt—will have the satisfaction of knowing that the court has come far toward his way of thinking.

Old Trend Wiped Out
In the last two years, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes has led the trend. The court has overruled itself once, and it has upheld such legislation as the Wagner labor act, the right of government to regulate wages and hours for women, and to change the gold content of the dollar.

Those decisions wipe out, in a large measure, the criticism Frankfurter long has implied, if not spoken—that the court had refused to recognize the Constitution as a flexible document, framed to meet changing conditions.

Important decisions that have progressed too far for Frankfurter participation, including questions of the government's TVA power yardstick, and the sit-down strike as an economic weapon for labor.

Still ahead, with the probability that Frankfurter will help frame them, are decisions on the legality of the Federal wage and hour law, the new farm act, and many labor cases of secondary importance.

But the legality of the New Deal has been fairly well established.

Back To Wilson
Mr. Roosevelt already has appointed two justices classified as liberals—Hugo Black of Alabama, and Stanley Reed of Kentucky. Now he has named as successor of the late Justice Cardozo, who was a Jew, Austrian-born Frankfurter, also a Jew.

The personnel of the present court goes back only so far as President Wilson. Wilson named the ultra-conservative James Clark McReynolds, and the liberal, Jewish Justice Louis D. Brandeis, now at 82, dean of the court.

Harding appointed the conservative Pierce Butler, and Coolidge appointed the former attorney general, Harlan F. Stone, a man of genial good humor.

Hoover selected the two outstanding fence-sitters, Chief Justice Hughes and Owen J. Roberts. They had a record for conservative law, but both have developed a liberal bent in the last few years.

Mr. Roosevelt can expect a 5-4 split in favor of liberal interpretation of the Constitution, but can get a 7-2 verdict if Hughes and Roberts are in the mood.

No Real Need
Washington insiders are talking much these days about the possibility that Roosevelt may get to appoint one or two more members of the court. Brandeis is said to be willing to retire, and some believe McReynolds may quit.

But that's gossip. After all, there is no real need, from the President's point of view for further appointments, unless it might be his desire to give the far west representation on the court.

Over $3,500 Collected First Week in Village
Kimberly—Harry Van Himbergen, Jr., village treasurer, reported that between $3,500 and $4,000 has been collected in taxes during the first week of collecting. Out of this amount $1,700 was taken in the first day. The total amount collected is about half of what the treasurer received last year during the same period.

Mr. Van Himbergen reported that as yet no dog taxes have been paid, which like property tax becomes delinquent after Feb. 28.

A large number of applicants have registered with George McElroy at the clubhouse to take part in the Major Bowes amateur program which will be held at the clubhouse on Feb. 10.

William Verhagen Post, No. 60 of the American Legion will hold its regular meeting at the clubhouse Tuesday evening.

Holy Name court of the Women's Catholic Order of Foresters will hold its regular meeting at the clubhouse at 7:30 Thursday evening. Cards will be played after the business session.

The Kimberly Study club will meet at the home of Mrs. Henry Patch at 7:25 Thursday evening. Mrs. Charles Kilpatrick is president of the club.

Appleton's Railroads Provide Extensive Passenger Service

Editor's note: This is the first of a series of stories designed to provide useful Appleton information frequently desired at a moment's notice but not always conveniently available.

Railroads running into Appleton and vicinity provide people of these parts with transportation to just about every nook and cranny in the state and to principal cities where they can board others for any part of the United States.

For the convenience of readers, information on passenger trains which run through and near the city is presented. The three railroads which give passenger service in this vicinity are the Chicago and North Western Railway, the Milwaukee road, and Soo line.

The Milwaukee road does not have passenger service into Appleton, but serves people of this area through its Hilbert station. The Chippewa, southbound, leaves Hilbert at 6:14 in the evening, reaching Chicago at 9:40. Northbound, it leaves Hilbert at 4:08 in the afternoon, reaching Iron Mountain, Mich., at 7:20.

Other Milwaukee road trains and their Hilbert schedule are as follows: southbound, 2:22 in the morning and 7:41 in the morning; northbound, 11:13 and 9:28 in the evening. Passengers must furnish their own transportation to Hilbert.

The Soo line's principal passenger business in this vicinity is done at Neenah. Daily trains leave there as follows: north and west, 11:27 in the evening and 7:28 in the morning; south and east, 7:59 in the morning and 4:09 in the afternoon.

The Soo line also has accommodations on its train going north as far as Argonne. The mixed train leaves Appleton at 9:05 in the morning. Taxi service is furnished by the Soo line from the depot in the city to the 'Y' on the northwest side of the city where the train stops. This train is southbound through the city at 12:30 in the afternoon.

The North Western Railway operates the fullest passenger schedule of all three companies, with trains coming directly into the Appleton station.

Following is the schedule for the main station in the city: Northbound, trains at 2:42, 7:43, and 8:17 in the morning; 1:39 and 1:54 in the afternoon; 7:47 and 11:37 in the evening.

Southbound: trains at 1:15, 7:43, 11:02, and 11:24 in the morning; 3:36 and 5:41 in the afternoon; 8:35 and 8:12 in the evening.

THE REAL REASON
"IT CAN'T HAPPEN HERE"

When Herr Hitler came to power there was elected a new Reichstag, the German congress, and which was invested with the usual legislative power as declared in the Weimer constitution.

But the Nazis did not want a Reichstag, even one overwhelmingly controlled by their own party. There was bound to be some opposition to their program and a Reichstag would thus become a great and annoying sounding board.

So, by plan and prearrangement, the Reichstag practically abandoned the purpose for which the people had chosen its members and conferred upon the ministers of state the authority to operate the government, to make its laws, to levy its taxes, to vote its appropriations, and to do every other thing which it might have done had it remained in active existence.

It was under that authority that the present German rulers commenced their remodeling of the German state. It was six years ago this next month that decrees were issued restricting the press, prohibiting public assembly and suppressing both men and publications that disobeyed. Even so all was not entirely clear sailing with the Nazi authorities. The German supreme court ruled that some of the newspaper suppressions were illegal. So the Nazi authorities created new courts, cynically baptized as People's Courts.

Gradually by decree the rulers wiped out every vestige of civil liberty, abolished postal and telegraphic secrecy, authorized raids on homes and the confiscation of private property in the pleasure of the police and specifically suspended every former German law that guaranteed to the people freedom of expression, religion and the like.

As the German nation had been built up during the last century it is plain to be seen that Hitler and his compatriots could not have turned that great nation into a despotism if the representatives of the people in the Reichstag had remained true to their created purposes.

And right there one may see a radical difference between the basic principles underlying German and American conceptions of government.

No one at least has complained that the Nazis did not follow legal forms, however much they may have prostituted them. Rulers in many European lands have traditionally enjoyed the privilege of retiring from office and conveying their right to rule to others.

The American system has been keenly hostile to this idea from its very inception. Excepting as provision is made for the filling of vacancies every officer mentioned in the constitution, whether executive, judicial or legislative, is denied the privilege of vesting his authority in someone else. He must either stand up and perform the duties of his office or make way for the successor provided by law in such contingencies.

Not long ago we read of the Wisconsin supreme court declaring void an order of the Emergency Board transferring certain funds. It placed its decision entirely upon the ground that the right to transfer those funds belonged to the legislature and that no other body would be permitted to exercise that function. We are all quite likely to miss the importance of the point involved simply because it might not have made a great deal of difference which side happened to win since the life of the state was not hanging in the balance. But historians demonstrate to us that precedents, examples, have certain gnawing or eroding effects that continue after the immediate cases are forgotten. Certain it is that if we do not adhere to our system with all the stubbornness and tenacity we can command we make possible at some future time a regime comparable to the Nazi however improbable it may appear now.

Great, energetic and resolute peoples may build nations, as have the Germans during the centuries. They may sweat and toil with immense blocks of granite to place as cornerstones for their national edifices. But the muse of history, solemnly reviewing men's efforts and failures, finds lacking in the German and similar systems a certain calm, poised and non-partisan sort of authority, a cement as it were to hold the blocks of granite in place against the tremors even of revolution, a court that can neither be packed nor cowed, but stands as the people's Friend No. 1 and will not tolerate the violation of men's rights in order to cram with power those who for a few short years happen to hold sway.

Is it not apparent that most of the savage wrongs that have developed in the Reich would have been next to impossible had there been a court in Germany with authority to say to the Reichstag: Sit and exercise your functions or resign so that the people may elect your successors?

ICKES ON THE NEWSPAPERS

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes speaking on the radio recently charged that the American press had been put in "shackles" by the publishers and private financial interests, and further that the newspapers of America are dominated by large advertisers. The inference was that most newspapers are unable to present the news fairly whenever it is in conflict with the wishes of the advertisers regardless of the public interest. Mr. Ickes' statement was to have been the presentation of one side of the question. Frank Gannett, publisher of several newspapers in New York state, was to have given the argument for the other side.

However, Mr. Ickes required so much time in explaining that newspapers should be fair and present both sides of every question that Mr. Gannett had insufficient time to give his side. In spite of the fact that Mr. Gannett's newspapers had been attacked in a damaging way by Ickes, the publisher was cut off in the midst of his reply. We wonder if Mr. Ickes noticed the irony in that situation.

If he did, as surely the public must have, he need not have worried much about it. In his zeal to present his attack on newspapers he used up Mr. Gannett's time, but much of that time went to Mr. Gannett's side of the question unintentionally. Mr. Ickes said:

"I understand that at Johns Hopkins university there is a very sensational finding resulting from the study of the effect of cigar smoking, that has not appeared so far as I know, in any newspaper in the United States. I wonder if that is because the tobacco companies are such large advertisers."

That was a damning statement directed at the entire press, and since it was made nearly a year after the finding had been published, probably there were few in the audience who could recall whether or not they had ever read such a report.

But there was one in the radio audience who heard and remembered. He was Dr. Raymond Pearl, Johns Hopkins University biologist, who wrote the paper on the effects of smoking. He was quick to answer Mr. Ickes, but he answered in the newspapers and not to that radio audience. Dr. Pearl said:

"My publication in science was of life tables of smokers. There was no specific mention of cigars. It showed that smoking was harmful; it dealt generally with all smokers."

"But so far from not having been given any publicity, the matter has been published in every cross-roads newspaper in the country, and the clippings have been delivered to me by the post."

Mr. Ickes is completely answered by Dr. Pearl. But we doubt much if he will learn anything from that. His discredited position following his earlier speech on "The Sixty Families" was enough to make any man cautious, but not Mr. Ickes. He it seems is willing to broadcast as fact anything he has heard or read. It is a practice unfair to the point of matching the worst even he has charged against the newspapers. Newspapers try to verify unsupported statements. In the haste of publishing news, matters of doubtful verity may be published if the material is carefully credited to the author. Thus Mr. Ickes' speeches are handled. It is the public's protection to know the source of the information.

MR. HOPKINS' POLITICS

The Administration for a long time denied that there was politics in relief. Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, was indignant in his rejection of charges that his organization was being used for political purposes.

Well, it now seems that it was true, and the witness who admits it is none other than Mr. Hopkins himself. Under a 3 1/2-hour examination at the hands of the Senate Committee on Commerce, inquiring into his fitness to be Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hopkins confessed error. Asked regarding political speeches he had made as head of WPA, Mr. Hopkins said:

"I do not want to duck that question. I do not want to imply I withdraw the contents of those speeches, but if I had the road to go over again, I would not have made them as Relief Administrator."

When Senator Vandenberg of Michigan showed a rising curve of WPA employment during the 1938 campaign, and just prior to the November election, with thereafter a drop, Mr. Hopkins said:

"I realize that there are people so cynical they say the rolls would be increased for an election."

There were 2,700,000 on the relief rolls in June, 1938, according to Mr. Vandenberg's chart, and 3,262,000 on the rolls the first week in November. If it be cynicism to suspect the reason for this rise, Mr. Hopkins leaves his critics to make the most of it. His answer is: "I do not want to tell you there has been no politics in relief, but we have tried to keep it out." He admits, however, that WPA supervisors were "pushed" by outside influences. But none of them was fired. As to the reason for not discharging them, Mr. Hopkins was vague. On this point he said:

"I think they (WPA local officials) should have been pitched out on their ear. They were not. I don't want to duck the responsibility in my shop, see? I think we should have fired them. We made mistakes."

As Senator White of Maine remarked, confession is good for the soul. But it doesn't change the record; it doesn't correct the brazen misuse of relief funds in an attempt to purchase the 1938 elections.

In short, what do the Administration and Congress intend to do about it now, if anything?

DALE HARRISON'S
In Old New York

New York—I have it on the authority of Mr. Sol Zait, a gatherer of Broadway trivia for The Billboard, that the hat check business around here is a million dollar a year industry, and this brings me to my favorite hate: tipping.

We who for one reason or another flit from one night club to another are constantly menaced by the shadow of bankruptcy because of the hat situation. To rescue a $5 hat from various checkrooms during the course of a year costs some of us about $50, which is outrageous.

Few night clubs operate their own checkrooms. They lease them out to concessionaires. The latter hire girls and men at small salaries. The tips you leave go not to the girls but to the concessionaire.

Club owners are paid fancy prices for the hat check, cigarette, flower-selling privileges. According to Zait, Billy Rose gets $40,000 a year from the concessionaire at his Casa Manana. The concessionaire at the Stork Club pays $1,000 a month.

The so-called "hat check king" of New York is Abe Ellis, a husky, slightly swarthy fellow who has made a fortune from the pleasure-loving public's dimes and quarters. Associated with him in some of his concessions is Oscar Markovich who on his own hook also operates the candy-and-doll selling concession in many of the theatres devoted to "girlie" shows. A few places decline to sell out the hat check privileges, electing to operate them themselves. Most of the hotels fall in this category.

An elaborate espionage system is operated to make sure the pretty hat check girls and cigarette girls don't knock down any tips. Several years ago, when the public first got wise to the fact that the pretty little girls to whom it tossed its dimes and quarters did not get the money for themselves, it became quite a thing for the customers to drop their tips into pockets on the girls' dresses; so now the concessionaires forbid pockets. Another practice was to drop the coins down the back of the girls' blouses; so now the girls wear dresses that fit snug and high.

In most places the concessionaires have installed locked boxes under the counter of the hatcheck rooms, with little slots in the counter through which the girls are required to drop the tips. Even with these precautions many girls have contrived to capture part of the proceeds by various methods. To prevent this, male attendants are put in charge to watch them closely. Not trusting even them, the concessionaires sometimes employ a head-waiter to keep an eye on the situation.

If all these schemes for keeping the tip "lake" intact fail (and sometimes they do) the concessionaires are always able to check a week's receipts against the normal intake of the place, and if the receipts drop off unaccountably, the staff of girls is quickly changed.

The logical thing for a concessionaire to do is to keep as much in the background as he can, so the public will continue to feel that the poor little working girls are getting the money. As profits have accrued, however, and the concessionaires have risen to an estate to which they weren't accustomed, some of them have hungered for publicity. They have employed press agents to spread their name and build them in public esteem as business gents.

This self-advertising now promises to backfire. The public doesn't cotton to the idea of men getting rich on money it hands to pretty girls. There has been a tendency lately to reduce the amount of the tip. There are ten cent tips today for hats at the swankiest places where even in depression days the customary procedure was to give a quarter.

The several quarters and half dollars which you see lying carelessly about on the hat check counters are merely decoys. The idea is to shame you into giving the girl that much money.

The profit on cigarettes is also terrific. Most places charge 25 cents for 15 cent cigarettes, and the girl expects a ten cent tip on top of that. Even the flower girl, charging a dollar or $1.25 for blooms that wholesale for 15 cents, anticipates a two-bit tip.

Sometimes I get so upset about this sort of thing that I almost want to write to my congressman.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Jan. 15, 1929

Six Valley council Boy Scout troop committee left Tuesday morning for Chicago to attend the Region 7 Council Officers' Training conference and annual regional committee meeting at the Edgewater Beach hotel. They were E. A. Killoren, Walter Friedland, Fred Rosenthal, Dr. E. J. Ladner, Cloyd Schroeder, and Dr. C. R. Kolb.

The First English Lutheran church had completed its most successful year in the history of the church, according to reports given at the annual meeting of the congregation. The report of the pastor, the Rev. F. C. Reuter, showed 69 members were added. The finance committee reported that the new church building fund had reached $15,000.

Officers of the Appleton Cemetery association were re-elected at the annual meeting Monday evening. They were President, Fred Peterson; vice president, F. J. Harwood; secretary and treasurer, Joseph F. Koffend, Jr.

25 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Jan. 20, 1914

Congressman Thomas F. Konop had appointed William K. Kolb of Appleton to a cadetship at the United States Military academy at West Point.

Cards bearing announcements of bans on various dances were distributed at the Stephenville auditorium which was owned by a stock composed of residents of the village of Stephenville and the town of Ellington. The cards read: "The following dances are strictly forbidden—tango, turkey trot, hesitation, Boston, grizzly bear, wiggle-wobble, grape vine, bunny hug, castle walk, fish walk or any similar dance."

O. D. Harris, engineer at the Appleton High school, pulled the first passenger or mixed train to Appleton from Manitowish over what is now the Ashland division in 1872 and before that time ran an engine to help build the railroad to this city, it was recalled that day.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

LIFE'S COLORS
(For Mrs. Fitzsimmons)

The web of my life's tapestry
Is made of threads that are fair.
The brown of David's eyes I see.
And the soft wings of his dark hair.

The shy blue eyes of Gloria
Form the clear motif of my days.
For Gloria's bright tresses are
The gold that threads familiar ways.

Sometimes across my tapestry
A shadow falls, but not for long.
My children's laughter rings for me;
Their colors gleam when days go wrong.

There may be fairer patterns of
A happy life, but my joy lies
In the bright innocence of love
That deepens in my children's eyes.

A Bystander
In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — This is a democratic city, of course, but —

In New York City, John D. Rockefeller was walking by the new building going up at Rockefeller Center and like any good steam shovel watcher, stopped to watch the work. A foreman hustled him along, whereupon Rockefeller created the "Side-walk Superintendents' Club" and provided it a sheltered walk where all could stop for a few moments in comfort and watch the digging. Several times daily a report is displayed showing the amount of dirt removed, and giving heaps of other information necessary to proper functioning of "sidewalk superintendents."

Now in Washington the government is building a huge memorial to Thomas Jefferson, greatest apostle of democracy. And scorch our soul if they haven't built a high board fence around the works. If this paradoxical situation indicates anything sinister, we don't know what it is.

Outlaw Burial Service

To keep you further posted on what goes on in this city we must report that two lads, aged about eight, have opened a free burial service for animals in Rock Creek Park in good smelling distance of fashionable Shoreham and Wardman Park hotels, not to mention how close it is to apartment houses where you can't let your dog out without having him sniff at a senator.

The boys have been going for several days now and have a dozen or more graves, each carefully marked. They bury dogs, canaries, cats, pet mice, or anything else except fish. They are very practical about fish and not the slightest bit sentimental, as they seem to be about other house pets.

"Just throw fish outside," they advise, "and they disappear."

They call for dead pets in a little wagon, but business even with such inducements is not especially brisk and now they display a sign near the graveyard advertising the service and giving their home telephone number. There is no charge whatever. There very definitely is a law against burying animals in Rock Creek Park, which is the city's pride and joy, but the law hasn't caught up yet with the two lads.

Home State Interest

Then there was the plight of three senators, Minton of Indiana, Schwellenbach of Washington, and Truman of Missouri, all Democrats, who were invited over to Vice-President Garner's office.

Arriving, they found the door locked, so knocked. No answer. Again and again they knocked, politely of course. Still no answer. Even western senators are not cantankerous enough to pound on the vice-president's door. They were no longer perplexed and on the point of leaving when Schwellenbach went to a wall telephone nearby and called Garner's number. Soon a door was opened. Garner and his staff were huddled about a radio in an inner room listening to a Texas sports broadcast.

At the time of the appointment to the supreme court of Justice Black, former Alabama senator, and Justice Reed, former Solicitor General, there was a wealth of comment about the relative qualifications of the two for the bench. Black had much the worst of it.

Reporters regularly covering the court now say that Justice Black's opinions are clear and understandable, while Reed's are a mirror of obscurity, at least from a layman's standpoint. Some suggest Reed may be handling more difficult cases, or at least they seem more difficult.

It's Odd
But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Wilmington, Del. — The story of uncovering a $40,000 smell is told by James K. Hunt of the Du Pont Company.

The smell is synthetic musk. The real musk, from a Tibetan deer, is estimated to be worth $40,000 a pound if it could be had in a pure state. The artificial article is the equivalent of pure musk.

It was found by accident. Chemists were investigating the structure of rubber, gelatin and cellulose, which are made of chain-like molecules. These molecules are like a string of snakes each hanging to the tail of another.

As a rule these materials have no smell. But occasionally an unexpected fragrance was found. It was identified as coming from molecules which had curled up into rings, as if the chain of snakes had let go of each other and each swallowed his own tail.

This difference in structure was the sole reason for the fragrance. The ring structure, moreover, was like that of musk and the fragrance the same.

Formation of the rings in the rubber-like materials was a rare occurrence. By learning how to make all the molecules behave in this unorthodox manner the chemists produced synthetic musk.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN GETS AWAY WITHOUT LOSING HIS SHIRT

— BUT HE WOULDN'T PLAY STRIP POKER! —

Under the
CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN W. WINGAARD

Madison—Although those familiar with the turn of state politics have seen it happening for many months, it was still somewhat dramatic to watch the Democratic party submerge its identity in the Republican administration at the state-house in a matter-of-fact way when the first house roll calls were made at the beginning of the new legislative session.

It clinched definitely, it seems, the Coalition idea, and makes it likely that in the future, for all practical purposes, Wisconsin will be a two party state.

The conclusion is strengthened by the fact that the leaders of the former state Democratic organization, C. E. Broughton, William D. Carroll, and William Shenners, have been unusually silent since their loud promises of patronage about six weeks ago.

There may be danger, however, in the assumption that the 15 assembly Democrats and the six Democratic senators will cling faithfully with their Republican cronies throughout the session.

APPOINTMENTS

On purely economic and political issues the Democrats in the legislature see eye to eye with their Republican brethren. As a matter of fact there are some Republicans more likely to kick the traces than such men as Ernest Sauld, Harry Bolens, Francis Yindra and Maurice Fitzsimmons on the Democratic side.

A sample of the problems which may cause Democratic dissatisfaction is the apportionment of jobs. The Democrats, it may be said, occupy the better seats, because they have the balance of power in the senate, without which the administration is powerless. And the Democrats expect a lot of consideration when the jobs are passed around, as Democrats usually do.

William E. O'Brien, who normally should leave his Progressive colleagues on the highway commission to the Democratic leaders. He was originally appointed by Governor Schmedeman. It will make the Democrats a lot more cooperative if some of the other big plums in the capital commissions are handed to them during the next two years.

COINCIDENCE

Mark Catlin, Jr., the Outagamie county Republican assemblyman who hurried to Madison last week to introduce a bill to abolish the department of commerce and the $7,000 job of its director, W. F. Ashe, was a member of Ashe's Lawrence college freshman football squad some years ago. Moreover, while Ashe was coaching the freshmen at Lawrence, Catlin's father was varsity coach.

Senator F. R. Fisher
Returns to Rochester

Waupaca — State Senator F. R. Fisher and Mrs. Fisher left Saturday afternoon for Rochester where they will remain at the Mayo clinic for the next three or four weeks. The Fishers returned to their home in Waupaca from Madison late Wednesday evening after attending the opening session of the legislature. Mr. Fisher is recovering from an operation performed Aug. 13 in Rochester. While at the clinic this time Mrs. Fisher also will enter as a patient.

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

ART OF RELAXING

Take care of yourself, get plenty of fresh air but avoid drafts, be sure and keep well under the covers, give nourishing but easily digestible food, you'd better wear a hat or the ultraviolet rays will addle your brains, did you brush your teeth this morning, Martin? And oh, my dear, are you going to take ice cream after lobster? — these and one or two other bright sayings always make me tired.

If one could only relax completely when tired, how fine that would be! Especially when one is all worn out and just a bundle of nerves. Boy, bring my Bronxophone.

In the physiological laboratory it has been shown that tense muscles mean active nerves, and that mental activity means not only that the brain is working, but also that there is tension in particular muscles. Relaxation of these tense muscles is a means of quieting undesirable mental or emotional states.

In reference to shifting, restlessness, grimaces, tics and other manifestations, Dr. Edmund Jacobson, in his work on "Progressive Relaxation" (University of Chicago Press) explains that what the patient calls "the feeling of nervousness" consists of the varied sensations from the disorderly muscular tensions, voluntary and involuntary, that mark his responses to environment. The work mentioned is too technical for laymen, but Dr. Jacobson's little book "Now You Can Relax" contains much that should help the "nervous" patient.

As this pioneer says: "The evidence is growing that the cultivation of general and differential relaxation is fundamental in meeting the years, worries and anxieties that are commonly called nervousness and in my experience the method is more effective toward persistent improvement in various conditions such as insomnia, functional nervous disorders, nervous indigestion, mucous colitis and high blood-pressure than attempting to talk the patient out of his disorders by various forms of mental therapy, including psychoanalysis."

In other words we have told patients to relax and forget it so much that the advice has become stereotyped and humorous. Now we must teach the patient how to relax, and it is an art as difficult to teach or to learn as is singing or painting. Dr. Jacobson's larger work teaches doctors to teach general and differential relaxation, and the little book helps patients to learn it.

A more or less constant scowl or frown or a peculiar twist of the mouth or a barely noticeable tic (habit spasm) of one kind or another is a familiar illustration of abnormal muscle tension. Look your friend over, or let your friend look you over for these stigmata of "nervousness" and try a little differential relaxation of them.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I am just twenty-one and believe or not I am very unhappy, because I haven't even a sign of a beard . . . please don't give me a reply such as "I'll see if Santa Claus won't leave you his." (W. K. F.)

Answer—It has no significance in itself. Why take it so seriously? I wish I could trade you my lowlife beard for your smooth face—I'd be willing to give you several top hairs to boot.

Brass Founders Agree

Job as gas cutter and burner in navy yard. Cutting galvanized iron with acetylene torch. Fumes make me sick, chest aches, breathing difficult, chills like the gripple, sick at stomach. . . . (F. A. W.)

Answer—Brass founders agree is due chiefly to zinc fumes. Poor ventilation of the work room is of course a factor. You should either have a change of work, a vacation, or quit the job.

Your Birthday

"CAPRICORN"

If January 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m., to 1:30 p. m.; from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m.; from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m., until midnight.

Favoritism is apt to be one of the foremost causes of some person's feeling terrifically dejected, so do not display this to anyone. This is an unattractive day to try to force a person to do anything against his will. A word of praise may work wonders, but fault-finding increases the chance of a matrimonial future together, must avoid dawdling or fooling time away, if they have an invitation or engagement to keep.

If a woman and January 18 is your birthday, you probably display in more than one way that you have the courage of your convictions. Prudence may make you often appear to be slow in making up your mind regarding your ideas on matters of importance. There may be a few people you trust thoroughly, but probably many you are very skeptical about, due to our having a more or less suspicious nature. With little effort you can be a good mixer and with popularity. In money matters it would seem you are going to be very fortunate. Your personality and originality may be best expressed through writing, painting, designing, composing, acting or doing work of a publicity nature. Apparently marriage is likely to provide the medium through which your greatest happiness is apt to come.

The child born on January 18, should attract many friends through his happy disposition and good nature. Many children born on this date become very influential, and have the mantle of leadership thrust upon them.

If a man and January 18 is your natal day, through intuitiveness and business acumen, you ought to make a success of anything you undertake, contracting, promoting, theatrical, theological or educational work, as well as painting or inventing, are among the likely means of your becoming widely known and very prosperous.

False-Card Play Fails To Save Bid

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Question 40 of the recent examination was designed deliberately to trap players who are overtimid about opening the bidding. Every elementary book prescribes two and one-half honor tricks as the minimum for an opening bid and, indeed, I myself have set this requirement as a generality for the instruction of beginners I have repeatedly preached, however, in this column and elsewhere that the distribution of a hand, and especially its adaptability to play in the major suits, must be given great consideration when the question of opening the bidding is involved. Question 40 was:

Both sides vulnerable. You are South. You deal and hold:

♠ Q 10 8 5 ♥ A K 10 8 6 2 ♦ J 3 ♣ A

What call do you make?

The correct answer, of course, was that South should bid one heart; that it is not only permissible but extremely wise to shade honor trick requirements by a plus value or so if the general characteristics of the hand compensate for this shading. I am gratified to report that of the 20,149 answers that reached me on this question, 66 per cent made the correct answer. To quote the actual figures: 14,402 bid one heart; 5,382 passed; 356 bid one spade.

Obviously the last named bid was a truly weird. With six hearts to the A K 10 and only four spades to the Q 10, it is a bit far to choose the higher ranking suit. Believe it or not, however, on due consideration I am inclined to feel that one spade is not quite as bad a call as a pass. At least the spade bidders appraised the potential value of the hand highly enough to open the bidding.

The bidding:

Yesterday I showed a hand in which a simple false-card by declarer led to his making the contract due to a poor guess by an opponent. Today I have an example of a really fine false-card, but an equally fine play by East doomed declarer to defeat.

West opened the diamond nine against the four heart contract, and East won with the king. Without a second's hesitation South followed with the eight spot. East continued with the diamond ace and declarer dropped the diamond queen.

East now went into a long huddle with himself. He idly toyed with the idea that his partner might hold the ace of diamonds. If this were so, then South did not have the semblance of an opening bid and free rebid. Might West hold K x of trump? This again was outlawed by virtue of South's free rebid. The only hope of setting the contract, therefore, was to find West with the queen or jack of trumps and thus able to overruff the dummy, should declarer be false-carding in the diamond suit.

Following this line of thought, East led a low diamond, declarer followed with the trey, and West ruffed with the jack. The spade break prevented declarer from ditching his second club and East eventually took the setting trick with the club king.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Drooping shoulders, hollow chest, and flesh forming high on your back are all due indirectly to lazy control of your midriff muscles. A control of your posture is poor and has been poor for some time!

Contrary to belief, a dowager's hump is not a sign of old age. It is unluckily, yes, and it is usually pronounced when a woman reaches her forties. But actually, a dowager's hump begins to form when you are very young if your posture is not erect.

By allowing your abdomen muscles to become flabby, your bosom falls, your shoulders drop and your chest narrows. Simultaneously your head and chin are thrust forward and the untoward, aging pad of flesh forms at the base of the neck. That flesh, should be distributed proportionately down your back and on your chest.

Posture Habits
Leaning over desks and typewriters, wearing clothes so heavy that they pull you forward, or too thick collars which do not allow your neck and head to be held erect, should be avoided. Shoes with too extreme heels for easy and correct carriage, sleeping with a very thick pillow, walking in a slouch, or wearing a heavy bob of hair resting on the nape of your neck, all tend to round your shoulders and hollow your chest. You should correct such tendencies and determine to carry yourself "tall" with regal grace at all times!

You must strengthen the weak muscles between your shoulder blades and try to develop the pectoral muscles at the sides of your chest. These muscles help to firm and hold the breasts in place, and permit your abdomen muscles to grow strong enough to make correct posture very natural. Few women have well developed pectoral muscles unless they swim a great deal or play such arm games as tennis or badminton.

Continued faulty posture robs old and young of symmetrical body beauty. Look at the dowager's hump.

Once a dowager's hump has formed it requires patient exercise to banish it but if you will exercise, that obvious middle-age droop will disappear.

I have prepared a new leaflet of corrective shoulder and chin exercises in collaboration with Miss Maurine Glasgow, physical director of a famous New York model's school. You may have it if you will write me, care of this paper and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request. It is called, "Rules to Banish the Dowager's Hump."

This leaflet is also good for those of you who complain of too much flesh across your shoulders. And if the suggested exercises are done with those given in my bust-building leaflet, almost any posture defect of the upper body may be corrected.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

Fancy Breads

"Our daily bread" will prove to be equally as stable as before and a good deal more attractive besides if it is varied in ingredients, form and character. Here are evidences of the infinite varieties of ingredients that may be assembled to achieve a golden, delectable loaf. These breads are best when a day old and make delicious sandwiches for school lunches, afternoon teas or a before bed snack.

ORANGE NUT BREAD
3 cups flour 1 cup milk
4 teaspoons baking powder 1 cup orange marmalade
1 teaspoon salt 1 cup nuts, coarsely chopped
1 cup sugar 1 cup shortening
1 egg 1 egg
1 egg

Sift the flour once before measuring. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Add grated orange rind. Cut in the shortening until the mixture is like a fine cornmeal. Add the milk, eggs and marmalade and mix well. Pour into well greased bread pan 8 1/2 by 4 1/2 inches. Let stand 20 minutes and bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees F. for 60 to 65 minutes.

PRUNE BREAD
1 tablespoon shortening 6 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup sugar 1/2 teaspoon soda
1 egg 1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup prune 2 cups pitted, cooked, chopped
2 cups graham flour 1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup sour milk
Cream shortening and sugar together. Add beaten egg and when well mixed add prune juice and sour milk. Add graham flour and mix well. Sift white flour with baking powder, soda and salt and with prunes and nuts. Beat thoroughly and pour into a greased bread pan. Bake one hour in a slow oven 325 degrees F. Makes 1 loaf.

PINEAPPLE BRAN BREAD
2 tablespoons 1/2 teaspoon salt
shortening 1 cup bran
1 cup honey 1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice
1 egg 1 egg
2 1/2 cups flour 1 cup chopped nuts
1 tablespoon 1 cup chopped nuts
baking powder
Cream shortening and honey. Add egg and beat with rotary beater until creamy. Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Stir about one half of dry ingredients into first mixture, add all bran and pineapple juice, and mix well. Add remainder of dry ingredients with nut meats and stir until flour disappears. Bake in greased loaf pan 4 1/2 by 8 1/2 inches, lined in the bottom with waxed paper, in moderate oven 350 degrees F. about 1 hour and 15 minutes.

My Neighbor Says—

Cook enough cereal at one time to use for at least two days. Pour 1 tablespoon of cold water over the top and when stored in the ice box a hard crust will not form on the top.

The flowered paper window shades sold in the household department of many stores make excellent shelf and drawer linings. Select gayly colored shades for linen closet and bureau, darker ones for kitchen drawers and cupboards. The window shade paper is tough and absorbent and outwears the ordinary shelf paper many times over. It is easily cut to measure as the patterns are usually repeated.

Smoking in Front of Child Is Better Than Trying to Hide It

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Helen, the children are coming."
"Well, what of it?"
"What that cigarette away. You don't want them to see you smoking."

"Hurry! They'll think they can smoke if you do."
"They will, some day, I have no doubt. Hello, chickens. Had a good day?"

"Yes, mother. Can we go sliding in the park if June's Nana takes us?"
"Sure. Get your lunch and change first. You'll need warmer stockings, won't you?"

"Yes, and our leggings, but no rubbers, please mother. Else we can't slide."
The children raced away and mother resumed her cigarette which she had held between her fingers, in plain sight, as she talked to the children. Aunt Hattie was red with rage.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself. Such an example. What would your mother say?"

"She would not want me to cheat whatever else I did. I smoke, for good or ill. I am not going to hide it from the children. In the first place they would catch me at it and I'd look like a fool. Besides they would know I was cheating, acting a lie; and I do not want them to think that their mother was a liar as well as a smoker. I think they'll forgive my smoking. They'll look at it as I do, as a matter of course. But they would not forgive my lying to them. Anyway, I'm not going to, ever."

Smoking is no sin. It is a habit indulged in by many decent men and women the wide world over. One started the children gathering packs of cigarettes from the soldiers in the World War we could not go back to making them believe that smoking was a bad business. Those sick and suffering men had to have smokes, and we supplied them. There are suffering men and women in the world today, as always, and if a smoke helps them over the hard place, who will deny it to them? If a smoke eases tired nerves, who is going to denounce it? Smoking to excess is bad. So is eating too much candy, drinking too much wine, talking too much, sleeping too much. Doing anything too much is fatal.

Children should not smoke. That little NOT can be made quite as much a matter of course as the one about playing with matches. No intelligent child questions that one. The smoking "not" is as imperative and as easy to teach. Being quite frank about the matter makes it easier. Children do not question what their parents do openly, usually, naturally. The way to make children take smoking casually, naturally, as an adult practice, is to accept it just that way.

I agree heartily that hiding any such thing from the children is bad practice. Let them know the truth, but don't make a dramatic staging of it if you want it accepted as a matter of fact. Cheating is far worse than smoking.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

NEW YEAR'S LOVE

by Angela Lorden

THE CHARACTERS
Noel Marchand, a beautiful young actress.

Allan Collings, a young man Noel secretly likes.

Mrs. Marchand, Allan's mother, not related to Noel.

Yesterday: Christmas Eve a mother and child take refuge in the barn. They bring the spirit of Christmas to the awkward group.

Chapter Nine
MERRY CHRISTMAS:
"Merry Christmas, my dear; you've helped make mine happier."

Mrs. Marchand, wrapped in a woolly white robe, bent over Noel's bed and kissed her.

The younger girl sat up quickly and returned the affectionate gesture. Her dark curls were tousled, her eyes opened widely to meet the morning sun pouring in through the two east windows.

"You've made it a real Christmas for me," Noel replied. "And for the others, too. You deserve a perfect day for yourself."

Noel got under her shower as soon as her hostess had gone, thinking as she put on her dark red woolen dress of the night before. Allan had gone into the attic and found some old toys—things he'd had when he was a child and that his mother had stored away.

What a wonderful time it had been, fixing up the things for little Jimmy—cleaning off the dust of years, making a fair for the old hobby horse out of a whisk broom, polishing the faded drum case, assembling the tin soldiers in a military line under the tree.

Noel was the first to join Mrs. Marchand and Allan. He said with he would be at a meeting in a club house auditorium.

Answer: You do whatever seems to you simplest and most natural. The advice in my book to which you refer does mean that in a fairly large roomful of people it is awkward to go marching around with each new arrival introducing her or him to perhaps twenty or thirty persons.

In small room in which people are not too far away—especially if their attention is not too engrossed—it would be perfectly simple to introduce a stranger to the half a dozen or so by merely standing in one place, announcing the names in turn and then announcing the name of the arrival. At the D. A. R. meeting it would be best to introduce your guest of honor to a few of the members who are seated nearby. And if it is not yet time for the beginning of your entertainment, he might be seated with them while he is waiting to be conducted to the platform. After he has delivered his lecture, the members will naturally congregate near the speakers' platform and you will then introduce him to all who approach within introduction distance.

ETHICS VERSUS CONVENTION
Dear Mrs. Post: If a woman whose husband deserted her several years ago, would like to marry again but does not herself have the money to secure a divorce, would etiquette frown too much upon her fiancée's idea of paying for this?

Answer: This, like the question of whether the bridegroom may buy his fiancée's trousseau, is NO, so far as etiquette is concerned. However, it is not so much a question of etiquette as of the effect that this may have upon your husband's future attitude toward you. It may not handicap your future happiness at all. Yet, on the other hand, there is something about such a transaction which suggests a primitive marriage agreement when the husband pays for the wife with so many head of cattle or sheep, or whatever it might be. In other words, from the point of view of the proprieties, the answer is no; from the point of view of what you and your fiancée choose to do, the answer depends upon him and you.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

Girls, if you wish to learn some of the basic secrets of masculine psychology, paste this Case Record in your scrapbook, and be sure to write for the test described below. It is excellent insurance against becoming an old maid!

CASE M-126: Hazel J., aged 23, is an attractive brunette.

"But something must be wrong with me," she protested, "for I don't seem to be very popular with boys."

Other girls with no better figures or more attractive clothes are able to get plenty of dates. I have a good education and appreciate good music and books, but the boys pass me by.

"Oh, I have a date once in awhile, but I don't seem able to hold my man. Maybe I am partly to blame, for the young men nowadays want she wants to have fun. To the average young woman, this means going to new places for dinner or a movie. She also likes to show off her attractive figure and clothing and, last but not least, the fact that she has a boy friend."

Girls enjoy wearing engagement rings and wedding bands. Why? For the same reason that the Indians used to carry scalp on their belts. It is a mark of social prestige. It means the girl has been able to win a man in this competitive modern market.

"Oh, they don't consciously admit all of these things, but this is their secret psychology."

Secrets Of Masculine Psychology
Men have a different slant on life. Movies and quaint tea rooms, exotic restaurants, etc., have much less effect on them. They realize that such things are apparently expected of them as part of what is called a conventional date, so they put up with it.

Where the average girl likes to go with the crowds, her escort wants to take her off alone. This is an essential difference between men and women which causes all sorts of quarrels after marriage, for the husbands quickly slip into a stodgy role of sitting home at night.

When a man gets a girl alone, it isn't long till he starts the petting process. Why? First, because it is natural for the male to be the aggressor. That is one of the essential sex differences between males and females.

But it isn't primarily her kisses or further sex liberties which he craves. His basic desire is for the exhilarating sense of masculine power and dominance. Sexual affairs are but a means to this end.

If he can bend a girl to his wishes, therefore, it makes him feel strong and important. He may care little for the girl, indeed, he may drop her for another girl a week or two later. What he is chiefly concerned with is his own feeling of strength.

Hints To Girls
A clever girl can inflame her boy friend's vanity without submitting to undue petting or unwise sexual to paw over you and make improper advances even on their first date.

"Since I refuse to indulge in such things, that apparently puts an end to future dates with such a boy friend."

"But, Dr. Crane, aren't there any young men left who enjoy having a good time at a dance or the movies without trying to be vulgar before the evening is over? I am all confused. What should I do?"

DIAGNOSIS:
Hazel's criticism is widespread, and indicates woman's faulty understanding of masculine psychology.

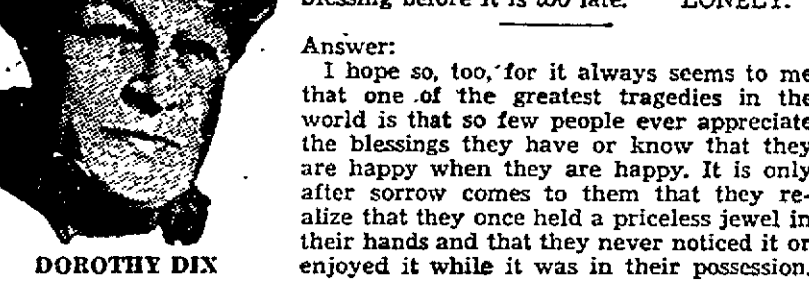

When a girl goes out on a date,

Wives Should Appreciate Their Husbands While They're Living

BY DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix—I lost my husband several months ago and the bitterest drop in my cup of grief is that I did not appreciate him until he was gone. Like so many other wives, I was given to self-pity. I felt myself neglected if my husband did not come home bringing champagne or flowers, or if he forgot my birthday. It never occurred to me to remember that he had never spoken a cross word to me and that he was always kind and thoughtful and loyal. I write this in the hope that some other woman married to a good man will appreciate her blessing before it is too late.

LONELY.

DOROTHY DIX

I know a woman who had a splendid and devoted husband who was kindness and tenderness itself to her. She had fine children, a beautiful home and enough money to supply her with every comfort, but she was always unhappy, discontented and fretful. She found continual fault with her husband. He didn't like to go to parties. He liked to read or evenings. He wasn't romantic. He was too much interested in his business.

She was always wailing over being tied down by the children; about their being noisy and mischievous; the way they wore out their shoes and outgrew their clothes. Her house wasn't as handsome as some other woman's and was on the wrong street, etc., etc. Life was just one gloom and disappointment after another to her.

Then the husband died and she lost her children in a terrible automobile accident. Her property was swept away from her by the depression. Now she is a lonely and forlorn old woman who spends her time talking about how happy she used to be, how good her husband was, how she adored her children and what a fine home she used to live in. But she valued none of them at the time.

A lot of women are like my friend. They acquire the self-pity habit, which is every whit as demoralizing as the dope habit. They get drunk on their own tears and they get a sadistic pleasure in torturing themselves over imaginary wrongs.

I am continually appalled over the little things which women let ruin their lives and the way in which they can conjure up bogey men with which to scare themselves. A woman will break her heart, for instance, over her husband having ceased to love her because he does liberties. But most girls don't understand a man's way of thinking, so they either surrender or else quarrel violently and have no further dates.

They should do neither. By directly using compliments a girl can hold a man without flattery. She can become a human being, giving for his sexual explorations. Never sacrifice to a callow youth's desire to gain sophistication along such lines.

Send me a long, self-addressed envelope with 6c postage thereon if you wish a copy of my TEST FOR THE GIRL FRIEND, based on the confidential reports of 1,144 unmarried men from 17 to 45 years of age.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on psychological problems. Write him, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a 3-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply. Letters and readers' names are never published.

INTRODUCTIONS
Dear Mrs. Post: In your book you have explained that in introducing a stranger to a roomful of people, he (or she) should never be taken around the room to each one, but should simply be introduced to a nearby group. I can never do this in my house as the living-room happens to be very small and the people many. To stand in one spot and attempt introductions always seems awkward and yet I feel, if I go from person to person with a newly arrived guest who doesn't know any one present, that I am committing a breach of etiquette. Will you please specialize on a situation like mine because I believe your general directions in the book are for a very big room where people's attentions would hardly be attracted to a new arrival. Another question I'd like to ask is how to arrange introductions, when entertaining the D. A. R. in my house, upon the arrival of the guest speaker—a man. All the women are assembled waiting and then the guest of honor arrives in our midst. That is, he cannot be whisked out of sight until his appearance on the platform the way

Five new men have obtained nomination papers at the office of Carl Becher, city clerk.

The three aldermanic candidates are Max Koenigseder, 712 W. Lorain, Eighth ward, Ervin Bogan, 1122 W. Commercial, Sixteenth ward, and Charles F. Hart, 301 N. State street, Eighth ward.

The two candidates for the county board are John W. Bauer, 919 W. Lawrence street, seeking to represent the Eighteenth ward, and Henry C. Voelz, 621 N. Appleton, who will run in the Fifth ward.

The emergence of Bauer and Voelz into the supervisors' field leaves only two wards, the Third and Fifteenth, in which there are as yet no candidates for the county board. Every ward has at least one candidate for the city council.

Three in Court for Traffic Violations

Three motorists appeared in municipal court of Judge Thomas H. Ryan yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty of traffic law violations.

Waupaca Youth Is Honored by Jaces For River Rescue

Robert Weden, 14, Given Medal for Saving Boy's Life

Waupaca — The Waupaca Junior Chamber of Commerce last night honored 14-year-old Robert Weden at a banquet, held in observance of National Jaces week, in recognition of his heroism in rescuing David Cook, 17, from the icy waters of the Waupaca river Dec. 10.

Robert, a Boy Scout and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Weden, was selected for the award by the state Jaces hero award committee. Hugh Raymond, vice president of the Waupaca Jaces, presented the youth with the medal.

It was a big night for Robert who sat at the banquet table. All he was able to say when given the medal was "thank you."

The Boy Scout was sliding on Footbridge hill on N. Division street when he saw David Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cook, slide into the river. Half swimming and half wading, the cold water which came to his chin, Robert pulled the boy to shore and brought him home.

Dr. Robert Orrick, president of the Waupaca Jaces, was toastmaster at the banquet. Carl Taylor, Milwaukee, executive secretary of the Building and Loan Association league, was the speaker. He spoke on "How to be Happy Though Prosperous." Raymond Millard, La Crosse, state Jaces president, also attended the meeting. About 100 persons were in attendance including guests from Appleton, La Crosse, Milwaukee and Wausau.

Dairy Industry Promotion Fund Growing Larger

Wisconsin Cooperative Creamery Association Subscribes

Madison — P. Lee I. Yorkson, field supervisor of the Wisconsin Dairy Industries association, announced today that one of the largest dairy organizations in the state has agreed to contribute to a sustained program for increasing consumption of dairy products.

A signed contract, Yorkson said, has been returned by District No. 2 of the Wisconsin Cooperative Creamery association, which includes 19 plants handling over 6,000,000 pounds of butterfat annually. The plants are located in Monroe, Juneau, Columbia, Vernon and Sauk counties.

The organization will contribute 50 cents on each 1,000 pounds of butterfat handled in its plants to advertise dairy commodities.

Membership subscriptions, open to anyone interested in the program, have also been received from the Wisconsin Swiss and Limburger Cheese Producers association and the Wisconsin Cooperative Milk Pool.

Bryce S. Landt, president of the association, estimated that contributions amounting to less than one per cent per cow each month would provide a fund of $200,000 a year if all Wisconsin dairy plants contribute.

The Wisconsin Agricultural Authority assisted in preparing the agreements which become effective when 50 per cent of the butterfat produced in the state has been contracted for.

Find Hybrid Corn Injurious to Soil

Brings Increased Drain on Fertility Special-ist Claims

Urbana, Ill. — (AP) — Spectacular yields of hybrid corn bring an increased drain on soil fertility, a crop specialist warned farmers today.

C. M. Linsley, a soil specialist in the college of agriculture at the University of Illinois, said high-yielding hybrid corn used up minerals in the soil at a much faster rate than did ordinary crops.

"There may be some difference between hybrids in the amount of minerals utilized," he said, "but miracle hybrids that can produce bumper yields without taking anything from the soil are yet to be produced. If such a hybrid should be discovered, it would have little value for feed or commercial use."

"The growing of hybrid corn is justified by the fact that high yields are essential to low production costs. However, it is essential that there be some reduction in acreage and more attention paid to soil fertility and the use of legumes. By growing more corn on fewer acres at less cost, the land taken out of corn can very well be devoted to soil building legume crops."

Linsley estimated that the 361,673,000 bushels of corn produced on Illinois farms in 1938 used the equivalent of 217,000 tons of rock phosphate or 430 carloads of 50 tons each. All this was drained directly from the soil. In addition to the phosphorus, he said, even larger amounts of nitrogen, potassium and lime were taken from the soil.

usually greeted Bull with a kiss upon his return from an absence, he added.

Bull was "most solicitous" for Mrs. Sidley and "most anxious" that everything be done for her welfare, the doctor testified.

The witness asserted Mrs. Sidley suffered from Pick's disease—a wasting of the front part of the brain, the section controlling speech and the movement of the hands, etc.

Cross-examination began shortly before the noon recess. Answering James Shaw of Milwaukee, counsel for Sidley, Campbell said he had never presented a bill for his observations relative to Mrs. Sidley's condition and had received no promise from Bull.

Referring to the "episode of fear," Campbell said Mrs. Sidley thought Bull should wear a bullet-proof vest.

W. H. Ryan Will Build Addition to Residence

W. H. Ryan, 219 S. Morrison street, has been given a permit by the city building inspector to construct an addition to his home. The addition will be 16 feet wide, 20 feet deep, and nine feet high, according to specifications on the permit. It will cost an estimated $750.

Mrs. Frank E. Meyer, 215 Black street, Kaukauna, has returned to her home from St. Elizabeth hospital where she underwent an operation and spent the last 10 days.

Harrington Hits At Effort to Ban Politics in WPA

Would Restrict Supervisory Group but Not Relief Workers

Washington — (AP) — Colonel F. C. Harrington, the WPA administrator, expressed opposition today to a provision of the house-approved relief bill designed to prevent political activity by WPA workers.

The New York world's fair, geography, potatoes and navigation provided the inspiration for some of the more striking specimens of nocturnal garb.

Described as an extreme novelty, the "cocktail hour" pajamas picture various drinks, together with mixing instructions, appealing as one fashion authority put it, "to those who are young in spirit and who want their pajamas plenty hot."

Less mercurial, but even more pictorial, was a garment labelled "coast to coast," which encases the male physique in a map of the United States showing all the state capitals and representing the major industry of each commonwealth.

Another flashy number was a bedtime "trailer" of the forthcoming world's fair, embodying pictures of principal buildings and exhibits at the exposition. For the nautically-minded there were pajamas figured with sailboats.

The old-fashioned night-shirt has been thoroughly modernized. What with its delicate hues, sash and short sleeves, it should cause even the most prosaic sleeper to regard himself with a touch of romantic wistfulness.

The relief question was the sole big issue immediately before congress, but the groundwork was laid for debate in other fields, in a proposal by Mr. Roosevelt to revive consideration of the controversial Passamaquoddy bay and Florida ship canal projects.

Both projects had fallen by the wayside when congress refused to appropriate funds, but Mr. Roosevelt wrote Chairman Mansfield (D-Texas) of the house rivers and harbors committee, asking that his committee take them up again.

Chairman Adams (D-Colo.) of the senate appropriations subcommittee said he hoped to conclude hearings on the relief bill this afternoon.

Course in 'Ideas for Cedar Chest' May be New Class at School

A class which might be named "Ideas for the Cedar Chest" will be held at the Appleton Vocational school, probably on Thursday afternoon, if a sufficient number of young ladies register, according to Miss Mabel Burke, head of the homemaking department of the school.

The girls will make luncheon sets, guest towels, aprons, linens, and other things for the cedar chest. It is also planned to hold another class of the same type Thursday evening, providing there is sufficient interest shown.

A class for waitresses in restaurants and tea rooms and for maids who serve in homes also will be added to the vocational school homemaking division if the number of young women interested warrants the course, Miss Burke announced today. The class may start this week.

The officers are Gustave Keller, president; R. A. Bentz, vice president; Miss Mae M. Bartmann, secretary; and Oscar J. Dorn, treasurer.

Dorn and Ed Jandrin were reelected directors and L. H. Stoegbauer was named as a new member to the board. Joseph A. Weber was elected to the credit committee. A talk by the Rev. Cypryan Abler, O. M. Cap., and reports by various officers were presented at the meeting.

'Stiff' Leg Functions After Tumble on Ice

Cleveland — (AP) — Four years ago a truck struck John McGonagle, and hurled him into a pile of snow, injuring a kneecap. After an operation the leg was stiff—permanently he was told.

The other day McGonagle slipped on the ice and again piled up in the snow. But this time he walked away with his game leg functioning normally.

terrible thing, and I want to take my punishment. Let's get it over with."

Ruth's widowed mother, Mrs. Ida L. Scott, 57, remains in a serious but not critical condition with a skull fracture from a hatchet blow.

Identifies Killer
Last night Mrs. Scott identified Mahr as the slayer of her daughter and the man who struck her when she resisted his attack. Kraemer said, in a dramatic scene beside her hospital bed.

Mrs. Scott looked up to see Mahr and Kraemer standing before her. "Do you know this man?" Kraemer asked.

Faintly, she answered. "Yes. That's Ernest Mahr."

"Is he the man who—?"

"Yes."

Then she covered her face with her hands and cried:

"Oh God, why did you do this?"

She pulled the covers over her face and a nurse tried to soothe her. In Mrs. Scott's presence, Kraemer said, Mahr made a third confession.

Kraemer quoted Mahr in his confessions as saying he entered the Scott residence searching for money he had overheard Mrs. Scott discussing Friday. The Mahr and Scotts had been acquainted many years.

Cloudy and Snow, Weatherman Says

Mercury Slips Down to 10 Above in City Last Night

Gusts of snow blew in people's faces today and the sun strove to puncture a thick bank of dark clouds as a moderate cold wave settled on Appleton and vicinity.

A thermometer reading of 13 above zero at 1:30 this afternoon about described the weather—not fearfully cold but plenty brisk.

Continued cloudiness, with more snow likely, is the forecast for Appleton and vicinity issued today by the Milwaukee weather bureau.

For the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning, the highest mark in the city was 23 and the lowest, recorded at 11 o'clock last night, 10 above, according to charts at the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant.

Miami, with 76, and Williston, N. D., with 16 below, were the hottest and coldest cities in the nation yesterday.

$25,000 Damage Suit Is Settled Before Trial Is Launched

Settlement of a $25,000 auto damage action for $7,050 was reached this morning in municipal court of Judge Thomas H. Ryan after a jury was drawn but before taking of testimony was started. The action was brought by Richard Estlin, Kaukauna, against Herman Maes, Kaukauna, and the American Automobile Insurance company.

Estlin claimed he was injured, while riding in a car being driven by Maes on Highway 47 about four miles south of Bonduel on Jan. 15, 1938. Estlin said the car skidded off the road and overturned.

CONSTIPATION HOLDS YOU BACK

This trouble may be due to nothing more than the lack of the right kind of "bulk" in your food... bulk which passes through the body without being consumed and helps to form a soft "bulky" mass in the bowels. If this is your difficulty, a crisp crunchy breakfast cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran will go right to the cause of the trouble by supplying the "bulk" you need. Eat All-Bran every day and drink plenty of water. Form the "regular" habit—and see how differently you feel. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Mr. Doudna is past district governor of Rotary International. Some of the questions which he will raise and discuss will be What is the attitude of people on the drink question? Shall a different social conscience on the subject be developed and if so, how? How can a social change take place in a democracy on such a controversial question? What part should the home, church and school play in the program? Who is responsible for social conduct? Shall the school go into politics? Can we and should we stick to the truth in education on alcohol? Can such education be carried out on a scientific basis? Is alcohol a medicine? Is it a stimulant or narcotic? Is it food? What shall we believe about alcohol? What does science teach about it? Shall we teach dogma or facts? Is education enough or is something else necessary?

County Probation Officer Describes Care of Children

Parent-Teacher Group Hears About Work in Foster Homes

Neenah—Declaring that delinquent girls were harder to place in foster homes than delinquent boys, Mrs. Alice Jamieson, Winnebago county probation officer, told members of the parent-teacher association Monday afternoon that Winnebago county tries to avoid institutional care for children unless the problem is so serious that the child needs controlled group life.

Mrs. Jamieson explained what facilities the county uses in its child welfare program when the home is not suitable for a neglected and for delinquent children. She emphasized the normal home life in foster homes that does much toward rehabilitating the child when its own home cannot be rehabilitated. Mrs. Jamieson explained the investigation and approvals necessary before a prospective foster home receives a license as such. Winnebago county has between 30 and 35 foster homes but there are not many in Neenah and Menasha. Fine foster homes in Omro and Waukau were cited by the speaker.

Foster Care

From $2 to $5 per week is paid to the foster parents for care of each child, depending on food and clothing needed, on care that must be given, on neighborhood and school facilities. The county spends about $2,500 per month for board, room, clothing, medical and dental needs for children under its care. The county pays $5 per week to the Winnebago Children's Country home for every child committed there. The speaker told her audience about the state schools for delinquent children and about the Catholic and Lutheran institutions. Mrs. A. Gross, president of the Roosevelt school association, announced that the February meeting would be a Go-to-School night with Mrs. Laura Uery and Miss Maude Dolbear in charge.

Seats Available For Carter Talk

Proceeds of Lecture Will Be Used for Welfare Projects

Neenah—Many desirable seats for the personal appearance lecture of Boake Carter, commentator and newspaper columnist, in Menasha High school auditorium, Saturday evening, are available according to the Twin City Emergency society, sponsors of the lecture. "There is all Latin America to the south of us to be cultivated and encouraged. There is Canada to the north. God gave us two great oceans on either side to protect us from invaders."

"If the politicians in Washington addressed themselves to realizing our national system of transportation alone, to bring down costs of distribution, and in turn to encourage manufacturing and thus promote a demand for more jobs in private enterprise, there wouldn't be any time left to go around with purple pills for pallid senators."

The Twin City Emergency society finance committee headed by Mrs. J. H. Kimberley is in charge of the arrangements for the lecture of Boake Carter. Mrs. S. N. Rickard is in charge of ticket sales.

Scientist Tells of Hopes for Cancer Cure in Talk to Club

Neenah—Declaring that cancers aren't contagious and can't be inherited, Dr. Harold Rusch, who is in charge of cancer research at Wisconsin university, listed some of the causes for cancer and told about one of the possibilities being tried for the cure of cancer in a talk Monday noon at the luncheon of the Neenah club.

"I am confident that the problems of curing cancer will be licked, not now but in the future, for there are many in the research field," the Madison doctor said. The present trend, he said, is to find a method of eradicating the tumor all at once, but until that is done, doctors will continue to use the present methods, such as radium and X-Ray.

Radiation, such as from radium which must be applied externally as in the case of the cancer of the stomach, is harmful to cell growth. Since it is impossible to apply radium direct, because the radiation continues indefinitely and would kill the patient, attempts are being made to transmit radiation into other material. By bombarding a table salt with high electric voltage, it will radiate like radium but the radiation will not last long. Then after making the salt go direct to the tumorous tissues, it will cure the cancer and then the radiation in the salt will die.

Just a Theory—Dr. Rusch said, however, that it was just a theory, but that some of the salt was being prepared at the Madison laboratory.

"We know what cancer is," the doctor said, "but we don't know what can be done about it." He explained the cell theory of the construction of the body. Growth occurs, not by the swelling of cells but by division of cells, and when they have performed their function, they mature and stop growing. Cancer results, however, when the cells don't stop growing and continue to divide, forming a tumor.

It has been proven definitely that cancers aren't contagious and can't be inherited, the doctor said, and he listed experiments which have been conducted which proved this to be true.

As to the causes of cancer, it was found that a certain chemical in tar produced the tumors, and there are 36 other chemicals which do the same thing. It also has been found that ultra violet rays from the sun produce cancer of the skin.

The doctor qualified the latter by saying that ordinary exposure to the sun's rays wouldn't produce a tumor, but that it was found that farmers and sailors and others who work continuously in the sun are subject to cancers of the skin.

Although there are several institutions doing research work in cancer, most of the work being done is in clinics, the doctor said. The laboratory at Madison is one of the leaders in the field.

Bluejays to Face League Leading Shawano Quintet

Indians and Bill Reed Will Invade Menasha Gym Friday

Menasha—The Menasha High school basketball team will start the second half of its Northeastern Wisconsin conference season Friday night, opposing the undefeated Shawano High school team in the Menasha gymnasium. The Shawano attack is centered around young Bill Reed, sensational sophomore who led the conference scoring as a freshman and is once more in the lead this year.

The Bluejays cagers, who have absorbed five defeats in six conference games, Monday afternoon started working for the Shawano game. Coach K. A. Calder set the team back to practicing fundamentals.

Henry Landskron showed the most fight of the Jays last Friday night when they fell before Neenah 34 to 21. The Red Rockets were the better team but Landskron attempted to make up the difference with sheer fight. Other members of the Menasha squad with greater physical advantages failed to show as well as Landskron. The Menasha forward played practically the entire game.

Shawano scored a 45 to 30 victory in the first meeting of the two schools this season. That 45 points was the highest total scored by the Indians in a single game. The 30 points by the Bluejays also was the most points scored against the Indians.

In an attempt to stop the Indians at Shawano the Jays committed 26 fouls, also a season record for one game. Fortunately the Indians made only 11 gift shots and missed 19. The Jays are well on the way towards the dubious honor of being the roughest team of the conference.

Neenah Cagers to Battle Kaukauna Here Friday Night

Rockets to Begin Second Round of NEW Conference

Neenah—Neenah High school's basketball quintet will begin its second round of games in the Northeastern Wisconsin conference here Friday night when the Red Rockets tangle with Kaukauna. The Rockets concluded the first round of six games with five victories and one loss, one game out of a tie for first place with the conference-leading Shawano Indians. The undefeated Indians currently are successfully defending their championship.

The most recent victory for the Neenah five was a 34 to 21 triumph over Menasha, and although the Rockets didn't have a great deal of trouble winning from the Bluejays, they were less than shooting, especially on short shots.

The Rockets will be seeking their second straight win over the Kaws, having defeated the Kaukauna quintet, 27 to 20, there in the opening conference game. The Kaws are in third place, and a victory for them will mean a second place tie with Neenah.

Schmidt Suits High

Captain Dan Schmidt, center, who scored six points against Menasha, will lead the Neenah crew in scoring, having counted 67 points so far this season. Harlan Hesselman, lanky guard, is second with 61 points, while Warren Kettering, guard, who was high scorer in the Menasha game with nine points, is third with 42 points.

Leo Peterson and Buxton Kettering, forwards, both have added plenty of points to Neenah's total, the former making 36 and the latter 29. Hackstock, forward, has made only eight points, but he is one of the team's stellar players.

Pegler Defends Objections To Jobs for Married Women

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Many emphatic ladies have filed dissenting opinions on the recent proposal in these dispatches that employers and politicians with appointive jobs to award avoid hiring women whose husbands are employed. The suggestion is treated as radical, even Hitleresque, in careless disregard of the fact that it would add nothing to the conditions of hire which already exist. In fact, there are existing conditions of eligibility imposed by some unions which are much more serious impairments of individual rights than the one proposed.

Employers in most lines already possess the right to select their employees and to discriminate without any obligation to explain matters to disappointed candidates. This right is being whittled down and eventually we may have a sort of civil service method of selection administered by labor organizations, possibly under government supervision. But in lines in which workers are selected singly or in small numbers the boss still can pick his employee, and it may be that already some companies give preference to supporting families. The boss may—and one hears that he sometimes does—turn away applicants for reason of religion, personal appearance or personal disfavor. He may turn down a superior individual and hire a mediocre merely because the lucky number has been sent by a big customer with a letter of recommendation, wrapped around a section of lead pipe.

It is often done. There are many familiar stories of the person who caught on for no other reason than that the boss liked the cut of his job or the color of her eyes.

Wouldn't Be Victim Of Any New Justice

This being so—and surely nobody will deny that it is—the married woman whose husband has a job plainly would not be the victim of any new justice. If it is unjust to permit the employer to give the job to a needier individual, that certainly does not come under the head of new business. True, that makes him the judge of need, but that is the way it is, nevertheless, and the way it has been all ways, yet, if he can obtain reliable information which leads him to select the head of a dependant family or a single-handed individual who must have a job in order to live, rejecting a woman whose husband has a good job, that discrimination is less harsh than other kinds.

True, as a strict matter of justice, the married woman whose husband has a job has a right to work for luxuries or merely to accumulate savings if she can get the job. But if she can't get the job, has she been wronged, and, if so, whom should she sue about that? It appears that any legal protection of her right, not to be discriminated against because of her economic status would require the services of another government bureau to examine applicants for private employment and compel employers, certified by an official administrator.

Union Restrictions Can Monopolize Jobs

Under the closed shop and disguised closed shop agreements both men and women employees, regardless of qualifications, ability and need, may be blacklisted by unions which thus possess authority to issue or withhold licenses to work. This method creates job trusts in certain crafts which limit apprenticeships and close their rolls to new members, thus monopolizing the available work for a select number. It is also possible, and the air of some union officials with political sympathies, to compel a reactionary Republican, for example, to join and pay dues to an organization which supports the New Deal and even to contribute money, through his dues, or work license fee, to a radical movement.

Such are restrictions and impositions already in practice, affecting both men and women, married and single, in harsh disregard for their rights and necessities of individuals who like to believe themselves free citizens. Thus the married woman whose husband has an adequate job may be disqualified for employment and denied her precious right to buy luxuries or save money merely because she refuses to contribute part of her earnings to a political movement which in her patriotic opinion is a threat against the peace and stability of the nation.

Player Prices, Salaries Climbed In Ruppert Era

By the AP Feature Service
COLONEL JACOB RUPPERT, owner of the Yankees, was perhaps the first millionaire to turn to baseball as a hobby. And the thrills and prestige he derived from the game caused other men of wealth to toss fortunes into baseball in recent years primarily for the sporting purpose of producing a winner. Profit was secondary with Colonel Jake and he spent recklessly to buy players who would bring him championships. William Wrigley of Chicago's Cubs, Tom Yawkey of Boston's Red Sox and Walter Briggs of Detroit's Tigers are other wealthy sportsmen. The high sale prices, big salaries and holdouts of recent years also can be traced to the Yankee brewmaster. Back in 1919 Ruppert paid the Boston Red Sox the then fabulous sum of $125,000 for Babe Ruth. Later years saw many players sold for around $100,000, while Yawkey paid $250,000 for Joe Cronin.

Players' salaries began to rise all over the major leagues as word of Babe Ruth's huge pay spread. Athletes gathered new ideas of their own worth as Babe's check rose and rose until it reached $80,000 in 1930-31. Following Babe's lead dozens of the players adopted holdout tactics in the spring. There had been previous holdouts, stubborn holdouts, but the strategy of the holdout as a publicity stunt as well as a lever to force larger salaries came from Ruth.

Both players and club owners discovered the publicity value of holdout maneuvers as Ruth and Ruppert claimed thousands of sport page columns through their annual disagreements. And the happy picture of the Babe and the Colonel finally reaching an amicable understanding, generally signing a contract under the Florida palms, is familiar to every sport addict.

While intensely interested in and personally acquainted with most of the Yankee players, Ruppert left the operation of the club strictly to his managers, Meller Huggins and later Joe McCarthy, and the business director, Ed Barrow, and backed them unreservedly in their every act.

Lawrence Grid Schedule Drawn

Vikings Will Open With Northern Teachers at Marquette, Mich.

With signing of Northern State Teachers college of Marquette, Mich., for a game to be played at Whiting Field here on Sept. 30, the 1939 football schedule of Lawrence college is complete. It was announced by Coach Bernie Hesolton today. Not since the Vikings met the University of Chicago four years ago have they opened their season with an out-of-state opponent.

It will be the first football meeting of the two schools although they have played in basketball. The balance of the schedule is the same as the past year when Lawrence took the Midwest conference championship defeating the five conference opponents. Carroll is the only other non-conference team on the program. Beloit will be the Armistice day attraction.

The complete schedule follows: Sept. 30, Northern State Teachers at Appleton. Oct. 7—Coe at Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Oct. 14—Carleton at Appleton. Oct. 21—Monmouth at Monmouth. Oct. 28—Carroll at Waukesha. Nov. 4—Ripon at Appleton. Nov. 11—Beloit at Appleton.

Upsets Hit Big 10; U. W. Cops, 42-39

Minnesota's Gophers Fall Before Northwestern Wildcats

OHIO BOWS, 45 TO 31

Illinois Winner Over Buckeyes; Indiana Tips Purdue

BY EARL HILLIGAN
CHICAGO—(AP)—A battle royal with every team packing a "knockout punch"—that's the way the Big Ten basketball title scramble shaped up today.

Minnesota, the club which had won three straight games in impressive style, figuratively picked itself off the floor, shook its head and attempted to figure out "how come" that stunning upset defeat the Gophers took last night at the hands of lowly Northwestern.

But Minnesota's defeat by the Wildcats, the first loss the Gophers have taken in 20 consecutive games was only one surprise development of last night's full conference program. Wisconsin upset Michigan and Illinois knocked Ohio State out of the undefeated class, indicating that the race will be a free-for-all battle to the finish.

Northwestern nosed Minnesota out 32 to 31 in a thriller which saw the score tied six times. At the halfway point the count was 16-15 and with but two minutes to play Northwestern led 32 to 27. But Minnesota roared back to score four straight points before the gun wrecked its hopes. It was Northwestern's first conference win in four starts.

Illinois Downs Ohio
Jamming its way into a tie with Minnesota and Indiana for the leadership, Illinois downed Ohio State, 45 to 31, handily winning its third game in four starts. Illinois led at halftime, 24 to 14.

Ben Stephens picked up nine more points to add to his impressive season's total as he and his Iowa mates defeated Chicago 29 to 19. The Hawkeyes, in winning their second title game in four starts, held the hapless Maroons scoreless during the last 14 minutes of play.

Purdue's Boilermakers, finding the going rougher than did their 1937-38 shotmakers, suffered a 39 to 36 defeat from Indiana's Hoosiers. Indiana made 13 out of 19 chances from the free shot line, with Purdue making good on 11 out of 14, each team making 13 field goals. The win was Indiana's third in four games and the defeat was Purdue's second in three starts.

O'Brien Won't Turn Pro; Now Coaches Say He's Too Small

THIS WEEK'S GAMES

Tuesday: Lawrence at Beloit; Coe at Cornell.

Wednesday: Monmouth at Carleton.

Friday: Lawrence at Knox.

Saturday: Lawrence at Monmouth.

TEN members of the Lawrence college basketball squad and Coach Arthur C. Denney left this morning for Beloit where Lawrence will clash with the downstaters in a Midwest conference game in Beloit's "cracker-box" gymnasium tonight.

Despite the fact the Vikings have looked good in their games with Carroll, Coe and Carleton, all bets are off on the Beloit game. Lawrence can have the best squad in the world but when it steps into the Beloit gym it immediately becomes the worst. The spectators sitting on the edge of the sidelines, the low ceiling and the change from the Lawrence gym is a handicap no Lawrence squad in years has been able to overcome.

Beloit has a ranking team again this season and on its home floor is especially "hot." It has played one game in Midwest competition and won. The victim was Ripon.

Lawrence probably will take Beloit all over the floor tonight instead of using a zone or standard defense. Coach Denney figures he has several men fast enough to keep on the Beloiters all evening and that perhaps he can keep the count down in that manner. The starting lineup will be the same as that which started against Carleton with Schrade at center, Novakowski and Jackson at forwards and Buesing and Faleide at guards.

Coach Louis Means of Beloit scouted Lawrence here Saturday evening and Coach Denney hopes to cross him up by changing the defense. However, Means probably appraised the ability of the various Vikings which doesn't help Lawrence any. The Gold lineup will show Smith, forward, and Tamulic, center, as the two scoring aces. Their starters will be Campbell, forward, Zimonick and Hoegberg, guards.

Dick Metz Takes First Money at Oakland Open

Oakland, Calif.—(AP)—One stroke was worth $1,200 to Dick Metz, Chicago golf professional when he beat Ernest J. Harrison of Oak Park, Ill., in an 18-hole playoff for first money in the third annual Oakland $5,000 open tournament yesterday.

Metz carded a 69, one below par for the Sequoyah course, while Harrison came in with a 70. The two pros were tied with 274 each when the tournament was supposed to have wound up Sunday, necessitating an extra round. For five days work the Oak Park shotmaker collected $750.

Metz was out in 34, one below par and came home on the last nine with a 35. Harrison shot 35 on both nines.

Green Bay—(AP)—The two highest scorers in the National Professional football league for the past season were Green Bay Packer all-league stars. Clarke Hinkle, full-back, scored 58 while Don Hutson, end, tallied 57 points.

weber, and he has a birth certificate to prove it. Bob Olin, who nearly starved to death when he was lightweight-weight champion, will collect $12,000 for three bouts in Australia. ... A lot of experts who saw Texas Christian do its stuff in the Sugar Bowl say Dutch Meyer's offense is the football of tomorrow. ... Jimmy Demaree, winner of the Los Angeles open, is called the Mexican Roisenbloom of goldmine by his friends. Like old slapsack Jimmy gives the night spots a strong play and is always ready for a guest turn at the mike. But, where's Meyer can't even carry a tune, Demaree can both croon and yodel. Marvin McCarthy suggests in the Chicago Times that boxing should have a novice division which would include every heavyweight who has not licked Tommy Farr at least once. ... The booming over the Farrman Decision (Burman got it) lasted through five rounds of the next bout.

Behind 18-8 after 13 minutes of play, the Badgers rallied to take a 20-18 half time lead and won out in the last minutes on reserve forward Andy Smith's sixth field goal and a free throw by John Rundel after a see-saw battle.

Rookie Tom Harmon, football star in the Michigan cagers' lineup because of injury to Jim Rae, bagged five field goals and four free throws to lead the scoring, with Smith of the Badgers finishing second high with 13 points. It was Wisconsin's second triumph in four games and Michigan's third defeat in four.

BACKSWING
AVOID LIFTING CLUB WITH RIGHT ARM ALONE - ELBOW RAISED
COORDINATE BODY TURN WITH ARC OF CLUBHEAD IN MAKING SLOTTING
TAKING THE CLUB BACK
Independent arm action in the backswing should be avoided. Lifting the club up with the right arm creates a position at the top of the stroke that is not conducive to accuracy. For instance the right elbow is often forced too far away from the body in the downswing this factor allows the clubhead to swing far out from the body, coming onto the ball from the outside. This method reduces the bodily power also for the pivot is reduced to a minimum, the body is left largely out of the picture and the muscles of the back, midsection and shoulders are not in a proper position to add their strength to the shot. In the correct swing, the body is the first to move. This occurs in the left hip which starts turning to the right, a revolving tendency which is taken up by the straight left arm which pushes the club back and up in response to this body turning pressure. By this method the weight is transferred to the right foot and the body gradually coiled for the downswing effect. By keeping the right arm comfortably close to the

Baseball Ready to Observe Its Centennial but What About the Goofier Aspects?

POOR SPORT PERILS

CERTAINLY the majority of hunters who go afield each year are sportsmen, but all too frequently there are a few poor sports who sully the record of the group. We have had frequent occasion to stress the value and necessity of complete and understanding cooperation between hunters and farmers if hunting seasons were to move along smoothly. The value and necessity still exist. Country-wide comments that have come in since the past hunting season prove this emphatically.

In many regions farmers are almost literally up in arms because of the violations on their lands. State conservation departments naturally investigate what has gone on and are likely to take action where the hunters have not lived up to the high standards of true sportsmen. A selfish, unreasonable few can give a black name to all hunters and must be held responsible for rulings which cut down the sport possibilities in many states.

Colorado Aroused
In Colorado the conservation authorities are particularly incensed over the "widespread disregard for the rights of farmers on whose land pheasants have been shot." Difficult situations have been created on account of complaints from many Colorado counties. Dr. Harold Watson, chairman of the state game and fish commission, and R. G. Parvin, director of the department, are both thoroughly aroused. The latter has declared that hunters in the past season have "gone wild" and that the open season will have to be abandoned unless a system can be worked out whereby farmers can be remunerated for permitting hunters to shoot on their land.

Surveys made in Colorado and other states indicate that the most frequent violation is hunting on private land without first obtaining permission from the land owner. Game laws as well as the spirit. More birds than the limit have been shot, and unlawful shooting from highways has been indulged in to the danger of motorists and other users of public thoroughfares.

Added to the violations of the rights of private property is the disregard of the very letter of the game laws as well as the spirit. More birds than the limit have been shot, and unlawful shooting from highways has been indulged in to the danger of motorists and other users of public thoroughfares.

Mike Jacobs Wonders if He Shouldn't Have Staged Louis Go With Lewis Out-of-Doors

BY GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK — Tickets for the Joe Louis-John Henry Lewis championship fight at the Garden a week from Wednesday night are, on the word of Promoter Mike Jacobs, selling so fast that Mike is beginning to suspect he should have waited and staged the thing outdoors. He says it looks like it might overflow the Garden.

If Mike is anywhere near right about it, this is a nice tribute that the customers are paying to a couple of Negro boys who have been close friends and admirers of each other's boxing ability for several years. When the match was first announced there were many capable observers who thought maybe Mike had at last found one.

Even if Joe and John Henry had been sworn enemies it still would have looked like a gamble, for there never before had been a heavy-weight championship fight between Negroes in this country. But Joe and John admitted from the start that they were friends, and they have stuck doggedly to their mutual regard all through the weeks of training.

Joe won't even talk as mean as he did before his last fight with Max Schmeling. He admitted he didn't like the German and insisted he would knock him kicking in the first round, which he did. All he'll say now is that he intends to "whup" John Henry, which he probably will.

Neither is John Henry doing any fancy talking. Possibly he is just being smart in not getting the champion unnecessarily aroused, but he has not once referred to Joe as "the bum" or threatened to knock him right into the land of his co-managers, John Roxborough and Julian Black. All John Henry claims is that he has an even chance of licking Louis, which is more than he thinks some of Joe's other recent opponents had.

It is a fact that some of the wise old managers and ex-fighters think that John Henry, though still likelier more than a light-heavyweight, will give Louis a good and honest peck of trouble. Nearly all of them declare he will stay the 15-round limit. It is noticeable that the more they have seen the challenger fight the better they regard his chances.

The DOG OWNER and HIS DOG

BY ALLAN KERR
Dear Mr. Kerr:
I am a constant reader of your column. I recall in one column that you have owned many breeds of dogs, among them a mastiff which is my favorite breed. I would like to know if they are still raised in the United States. Do not confuse with the bull-mastiff, I mean the old English mastiff. If you know of anyone breeding the mastiff dog please print it in your column.

Yours truly,
Edgar Rock, Dale, Wis.
Yes, a huge sad faced mastiff did once grace our home and yard. But that was a long time ago, about the time of the beginning of rapid decline in popularity of the breed. There is a picture in the old album.

Land of the Turks

II--Rise of the Ottoman Empire.

From time to time, great masses of soldiers from Asia have pushed their way westward toward Europe. These soldiers most often have been Mongols. One of their famous leaders in the Middle Ages was Genghis Khan. The huge "empires" of the Mongols did not last long, but their conquests were important in one way, and another.

Seven centuries ago, the so-called Ottoman Turks were driven from their homeland in central Asia. Fleeing before the Mongols, they entered Asia Minor, and settled there.

The Ottoman Turks were named in honor of one of their early leaders, a man known as Osman or Othman. He might be called "the Father of Turkey," but several other leaders also helped build up Turkish power.

The Ottoman Turks were relatives of the Seljuk Turks, who had moved westward in the earlier days, and had won Persia, Palestine and parts of Asia Minor. After the Ottomans came, they took away the power of the Seljuks and became the rulers of the Turkish empire.

The empire kept growing and growing. The Ottoman Turks conquered Syria and Egypt. They also obtained sections of northwestern Africa. For a time their warships were the strongest on the Mediterranean sea.

Even more important, the Turks started to invade Europe. They obtained a foothold near Constantinople, and years later attacked and captured that famous city. Then they spread their power northward and westward.

Two and half centuries ago, the Turks were beaten at the gates of Vienna. They had won the countries which now are known as Bulgaria, Greece, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Albania and Hungary!

Austria had not come to their hands if an army led by a Pole had not come to the rescue of Vienna. That was the end of the westward march of the Turks in Europe.

In later years, there were wars for freedom in the Balkans, also warfare with Russia. Piece after piece of the Turkish empire was taken away. At the outbreak of the World War, Turkey had only about as much land in Europe as it has today, which isn't a great deal.

The old Turkish empire was ruled by sultans, with no power in the hands of the plain people. In 1908, however, a Turkish parliament was opened, and the people obtained a share of the power to make their country's laws.

Lawyer Explains Inheritance Taxes at Meeting of Rotarians

New London—"Inheritance Taxes and Tax Savings" was the subject of a talk by Attorney Ormond W. Capener before the New London Rotary club at the Elwood hotel yesterday noon. The speaker showed how such taxes may lawfully be reduced three-fourths, one-half or one-third by proper drawing of a will. Such methods are termed tax saving, not tax evasion, he pointed out.

While a direct tax, it best accomplishes the equalization of wealth without disturbing individual initiative which is important to American democracy, according to the speaker. The Wisconsin tax is more extensive than the federal law, he said, imposing a tax on transfers by will, in contemplation of death, after death without a will, and transfers of joint interest between husband and wife. In the latter case, one-half the total value of the property is taxable, he said.

Lists Exemptions

An inheritance tax, the attorney explained, is paid for the privilege of obtaining an inheritance while an estate tax is paid for the privilege of giving property away. All life insurance is subject to the tax unless made payable to a named beneficiary.

State tax exemptions for a man with a wife begin at $15,000 with $2,000 exemption for each child. Federal exemption begins at $40,000 and the rate of taxes changes proportionately with the degree of relationship between donor and beneficiary.

The tax on an estate of $50,000 may amount to $3,000 without any attempt at savings, he said.

Speaker Capener's birthday anniversary was observed by the club and his birthday cake was taken by the Rev. R. J. Fox who was a guest of Rotarian F. J. Murphy.

Norma Shearer, as Irene, and Clark Gable, as Harry, in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Idiot's Delight." Clarence Brown directed this picture which was adapted to the screen by Robert E. Sherwood, author of the stage play. Incidentally, this is the third time that Miss Shearer and Gable have appeared together. Their previous films include "A Free Soul" and "Strange Interlude."

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood — Looking over today's list of pictures now shooting and to be started within the next month, I note that four of them are expected to cost approximately $2,000,000 each—and I'm wondering why.

In eighteen years, exactly twenty-four of the nearly 9,000 pictures produced have grossed as much as $2,000,000—and these twenty-four were pictures to conjure with. The first all-talkie, all-single, with Al Jolson as star, the two greatest Charlie Chaplin comedies: the first "Mae West" shocker; the great Biblical colossal, "The Ten Commandments." Every one had special sales appeal and seventeen of them were produced in boom times, when Tom, Dick and Harry had no trouble paying admission fees. Please note, too, that the other seven were made when Hollywood had a world market for its merchandise.

I can't understand such prodigal costs today. The world market has been whittled away by totalitarian trade bans until only a few important territories remain. Business conditions are still bad in the United States — so bad that a $2,000,000 picture is a thousand-to-one shot. In the long run such extravagance affects every theater-goer, for Hollywood has a neat little habit of making up its losses by cramming cheaply-produced, below-par junk into the theaters. Block-booking and producer-owned theater chains make such pictures sure-fire investments — but who wants to see them? I'm sure most of us would prefer to see studios reaping a profit from fine pictures, economically made. That's the one production program that will give us a high average of screen entertainment.

IDOL CHATTER: Clark Gable's mouth is ample, too. Look alike: Eddie Cantor and Moon Mullins of Funny paper fame. I'd like to see the memory course that would do Victor McLaglen any good. Surely you remember Hedy Lamarr—she's that girl we used to see so much of. Wouldn't it be wonderful to face the world with the self-confidence and unconcern that Fred MacMurray seems to feel. How-times-change note: Mische Auer, who rides a horse for exercise now, would have been glad to eat one during his last year in Russia.

What a Rubaiyat W. C. Fields could write — if he could only write. The two most talked-about actors in Hollywood today aren't stars; they're character-actors Walter Brennan and Gene Lockhart. Outstanding long shot of 1938: "Love Finds Andy Hardy" — it paid Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 12 for 1. What with bad pictures and lulls in her life, it begins to look as though "Stage Door" might have been a photo-finish for Andrea Leeds. Wonder if it was smoke that got in Wayne

Morris' eyes when he fell for Bubbles "Tobacco - Heiress" Sehnsasi? Watch the fun when Sam Goldwyn brings Richard Bennett out here for "I Am a Doctor"—there's a man who takes his temperament seriously. Bert Lahr thinks it's because superstitious people knock wood that Charlie McCarthy knocks people. There's a brilliancy about Jeanette MacDonald's beauty that reminds me of a cellophane flame. Today's rueful reflection: Isn't it a shame that so many stars' mirrors are vanity cases. In profile, Jimmy Durante hasn't so much on William Powell, at that.

Whenever the Lakesiders get to talking about the business coups of movie stars—and they were last night — someone invariably tells about Gary Cooper's amazing stroke at Paramount. It happened about seven years ago. Gary, freshly graduated from cheap westerns, was getting five hundred per when his contract expired, and when the studio proposed renewing at $20,000 a picture. "How do you know I'm worth that much—maybe you'd be overpaying me," said Gary, and went to the desert. The studio, with three Gary Cooper pictures promised to its exhibitors, phoned him daily — and Gary invariably thought "maybe $20,000 might be too much." It's two weeks later, Paramount made him another offer, and he took it. He signed for $25,000 a picture!

Stopped in on the set where Bob Burns is making final scenes for "I'm from Missouri" and found him before the cameras, stripped to the waist, with a very English butler scrubbing his back. The director pronounced the first take perfect, but Bob insisted on shooting it again. "Do you think you can improve on the scene?" asked the director—and Bob grinned happily. "It ain't that," he said in his best hillbilly drawl. "I'm gettin' me a real kick outa this here scene. If you'd been born and raised in Van Buren, maybe you'd understand."

Jack Oakie tells about the resourceful actor who hi-pressed a studio into signing him by assuring the producer that three other companies were after him. "Do you mind telling what companies wanted you?" asked the big-shot after the contract was signed. "Certainly not," laughed the mime. "The light company, the finance company and the gas company."

Christian Mothers to Give Series of Parties

Hollandtown — Christian Mothers are planning several series of card parties, to be given in February and March and next autumn. Women on the committee for a party Feb. 5 are Mrs. Mike Dries, Mrs. Henry Ver Bockel, Mrs. Henry Rademacher, Mrs. Mike Lauer, Mrs. John Schmidt and Mrs. Henry Schmidt.

A horse owned by Adam Holseub was struck by an automobile driven by William Brochtrup near the Holschub residence on County Trunk D about 7:30 Sunday evening. The animal crossed the road in front of the car and Mr. Brochtrup was unable to stop the machine. The horse was injured and was shot.

He said, however, there appeared to be little prospect that enough Democrats would side with the minority party members to block Hopkins' approval.

"The people of Michigan did not have confidence enough in him after a fair trial to reelect him governor." Bridges went on.

The New Hampshire senator said Murphy had taken an oath to uphold state and national laws and

NEW YEAR'S LOVE

by Angela Lorden

looked white, his lips were drawn tightly. She thought there was something tragic about him and she was glad that in a moment Allan unobtrusively walked over to Tommy and talked with him.

The gay breakfast with its talking and laughter over, Mrs. Marchand said to her guests:

"We're going to church and we'd like to have those of you who wish come with us."

Allan brought the big closed car around and Annie's husband drove up with the station wagon. On the way, sitting beside Allan in the front seat, Noel asked suddenly:

"I didn't see Mr. Sheldon."

Allan's face was serious. "He didn't want to come. I feel sorry for that youngster. There's something tragic about him."

During the beautiful solemn service Noel found herself thinking about poor young Tommy and his strange aloof behavior.

Back in the house after church, Allan served sherry. Jimmy couldn't be dragged from his toys but his mother had gone upstairs immediately and when dinner was announced and Mrs. Marchand went up to her room, she said with pathetic apology:

"Jimmy and I can eat in the kitchen—and then we'll be going."

"You're both our guests."

And so they all gathered round the long table in the tremendous old dining-room, the strange assortment of guests who would otherwise not have known this sort of Christmas.

"I was wrong," Allan told Noel afterwards as they had coffee in the living-room. "My mother always knows best. I should have known that, too."

"Tomorrow we'll talk about you. I want Jimmy and you to stay over tonight," Mrs. Marchand insisted when Mary Johnson spoke again of leaving.

Mrs. Barton was being maternal toward Janice whose eyes still followed Allan's movements.

"She's thinking of her own daughter, I guess," Elsie Grant suggested to Noel while they were talking together. "Mrs. Barton told me last night her only child's married in Honolulu and she hasn't seen her for two years."

Warmth of His Voice

"Let's talk about you," Noel remarked and listened to Elsie's half confessed story of her dreams of a New York success. Noel could guess at the failures.

"I know several people who have shops," she suggested. "When we get back to New York we'll do something about finding you a place that you'll like."

Tommy Sheldon and little Jimmy went out on the grounds and later when some of the others put on their coats they found the taciturn young man knee-deep in a snow house.

"He seems contented now," Noel remarked to Allan as they watched from the porch.

"Well, he's interested; that's something. Later I intend to have a talk with that fellow and find out what's wrong."

Noel knew, if he found out, he'd do something about it.

Hours sped by in leisurely contentment. Janice and Elsie were leaving on the night train. Janice had to be at work early next morning. Elsie and Noel would meet in New York; Elsie seemed cheered by the prospect of Noel's help. The other guests would go back to town the next day.

"You must stay a while; we don't want to lose you," Mrs. Marchand told Noel who agreed to stay on another day. There was nothing, except waiting, back in New York.

When, finally at the end of the happy day, "Goodnight" were exchanged Allan said to Noel:

"Won't you stay up and watch the fire go out with me?"

Across from each other with the burning logs between them, Noel and Allan talked interminably.

"I've never been so happy on Christmas day," Noel told him.

She was relaxed. Problems seemed far away. Even the play was remote and she remembered guiltily that she hadn't been thinking much of David, either.

"That's a beautiful ring," Allan said suddenly, his eyes on the gleaming emerald that seemed to catch the heart of the fire's light.

"It was a Christmas present from a dear friend," Noel couldn't help blushing. Allan knew who had given it, she was sure.

Later she couldn't remember all the things they had said to each other. But the warmth of his voice, the keen straight look in his eyes that could soften so with his moods, the way his red hair grew away from his nice broad forehead—these things were with her as she stood out of the window of her room.

"He's different from anyone else," she whispered to the night that crept up to her window. And wouldn't let herself think farther than that. When he had held her hand in his clasp before he left her on the top of the stairs, he had looked down on her so strangely. She couldn't interpret his gaze. She didn't dare.

A knock on the door interrupted her thoughts. When she opened it to Mrs. Marchand, she knew something was wrong.

"I don't want to disturb you," her hostess explained. "And I don't want Allan to know until morning. I won't have anything spoil this lovely Christmas."

"What's wrong?" Noel asked fearfully, yet relieved that it had nothing to do with Allan.

"My sapphire bracelet is gone—I had it on my dressing-table this morning."
